New York's Law CAIRO MEETING ENDS On Death Penalty WITH NO FINAL PACT Is Found Invalid

By DENA KLEIMAN

A State Supreme Court justice ruled yesterday that New York State's death penalty law was unconstitutional, in the first legal test of the law since a landmark decision by the United States Sureme Court last summer.

In so doing, Justice Peter J. McQuillan spared the life of Joseph Velez, who had been sentenced to death for killing an off-duty policeman in 1975, and reduced the sentence to life imprisonment. Mr. Velez, who is 31 years old, will be eligible for parole after 25 years.

Justice McQuillan ruled that the statute, which mandates execution for the murder of a policeman or prison guard, was "cruel and unusual punishme it did not give a judge or a jury leeway to exercise discretion in deciding an appropriate sentence for a particular case.

Since Justice McQuillan serves on State Supreme Court, the trial court of general jurisdiction, his ruling is not binding on other Supreme Court justices. However, it is expected to be given great weight by them: It is the first decision giving easons why the statute is constitutionally defective, and Justice McQuillan is conidered one of the leading authorities on he state's criminal law. But the Arab Leaders Appear to Imply That the Syrians Will Have Dominant Role

By JAMES F. CLARITY

CAIRO, Oct. 26-Arab leaders ended a two-day conference here without final panded Arab peacekeeping force for Leba anon. But their closing statements appeared to imply that Syrian troops already in Lebanon would dominate it.

A fund to pay for the force was agreed on, with the richer oil-producing Arab: countries pledging to provide most of the

After two days of sometimes rancorous argument over Syria's role in Lebanon and the composition of the peacekeeping force, the meeting ended tonight several hours later than scheduled and with an unexplained cancellation of a final open session of the 14 heads of state and senior officials representing the 21

Arab League members at the conference. It was officially announced that there would be no immediate disclosure of how many troops would be provided for the force, which now consists of about 2,300 and which is to be expanded to 30,000. The exact composition, the announcement said, will be worked out by the secretary general of the Arab League, Mahmoud Riad of Egypt.

Syria Would Predominate

Arab officials said they interpreted the ennouncement as meaning that Syria, which already has 23,000 soldiers in Lebanon, would make up more than half, and perhaps two-thirds, of the force. Arab leaders here muffled their quarrels with each other and indicated that they would turn their invective increasingly toward Israel, which was described by several leaders here as the chief beneficiary of the Lebanese war and quarreling among the Arabs.

It Says Forgery by Chiang Ching Led to Arrest of Her and Other Leftists

By FOX BUITERFIELD

HONG KONG, Oct. 26-Shortly after Mao Ise-tung died last month, his widow, Chiang Ching, took out several of Mao's documents from the Communist Party's special archives and reworded them, a Hong Kong newspaper said today.

According to the paper, Ming Pao, respected independent daily, when China's new leader, Hua Kuo-feng, discovered that Miss Chiang had removed the documents without proper permission, he ordered her to return them immediately and then discovered the alterations. The paper said that this was one of several actions by Miss Chiang that led Mr. Hua to arrest her and three leftist colleagues on Oct. 6.

Ming Pao said the story of forgery by Miss Chiang is being circulated among party members in Canton to explain the leftists' arrest and disgrace. The story was brought to Hong Kong by a Chinese traveler who heard it from a friend who is a middle-grade official.

There was no independent confirmation of the newspaper's report. But analysts here said that it seemed in line with reports they have heard from other Chinese souces and sounded highly plausible. A Chinese Communist representative in Hong Kong said today that the story appeared to be "based on facts."

Tampering Is Charged

An official editorial published yesterday in Peking charged that Miss Chiang and the three others had "tampered with Chairman Mao's directives," among other alleged crimes.

According to the Hang Kong news-toaper, Mr. Huz was also angered when the discovered that someone had altered the wording of a directive Mao had written on April 30 in Mr. Hua's presence. The altered version was then published in a major joint editorial on Sept. 16. Map died on Sept. 9.

In the changed form, the directive read. "Act according to the principles laid down." The editorial used the quotation to make the point that the Chinese people should follow Mao's policies.

Analysts here noted at the time that Mr. Hua himself did not use the quotation when he delivered the eulogy for Mao on Sept 18, only two days after the editorial came out. His omission was considered highly unusual. The quotation has not been used since Oct. 6, when the four leftists were reportedly arrested.

Leftist Was Reported In Control

Before the arrest of the leftists, control over the party paper, Jenmin Jih Pao, and the party theoretical journal, Hung Chi, is believed to have rested with Yao Wen-yuan, another of the group.

Analysts here were particularly interested in the reported dispute over the wording of Mao's directive, for it seemingly involved only a slight change, the ngly involved only a slight change, the is not yet cold and you want to get rid ignificance of which is hard to translate of me. According to the report that is said o be circulating among party members in Canton, Mao originally wrote down three directives for Mr. Hua after Mr. Hua had brought Prime Minister Robert Muldoon of New Zealand to see him on April 30. Mao asked Mr. Hua to stay after Mr. Muldocn was ushered out, and Mr. Hua delivered a report on progress in the campaign to criticize Teng Hsiao-ping, the ousted Deputy Prime Minister.

Mao then wrote out:
"Act gradually and don't be in a hurry. Act according to the principles in the past. With you in charge, I'm at ease." But, Ming Pao said today, when Mr. Hua how got into the minutes of the conference as "Act according to the principles laid down."

Although small, the distinction between the two seemed to be that in Mao's origi-nal version, he meant principles generally known in the past. But in the aftered version, the "principles laid down," only some limited officials might know what those were and could interpret them.

The Horg Kong paper said that after Mao's death Miss Chiang had gone to the archives of the party central committee and told the archivist to give her certain documents relating to Mao. The archivist, identified only as "Little Chang," a common form of address in China, was afraid to refuse but immediately told Wang Tung-hsing, a Politburo member who was for many years head of Mao's bodyguards and now is believed to head the general office of the central committee. The general office handles sensitive assignments and coordinates contacts between senior officials, including the Chairman.

Archivist Is Contacted

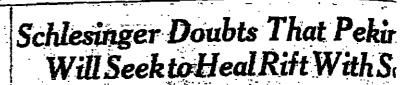

Mr. Wang, a shadowy figure who is believed to identify only with Mad and not to have been involved in the years of party squabbles, was upset and told the archivist to get the documents back.
This time Miss Chiang is alleged to have scolded the archivist, and so Mr.

Wang had to call Mr. Hua for help. Mr. Hua telephoned Miss Chiang and this time she complied. But later she was said to have bitterly attacked Mr. Rua.

According to Ming Pao, she was reported to have said: "Chairman Mao's body!

King Khalid of conservative Saudi Arabia has twice met with Salem Rubaya, head of state of Saudi Arabia's Marxist neighbor, Southern Yemen. The two leaders are attempting to improve relations after years of conflict.

King Hussein of Jordan held a private meeting with President Assad. The King was the center of attention at the last Arab leaders' conference in Morocco, two years ago today, when he tried unsuccessfully to resist a decision to designate the Palestine Liberation Organization as the representative of the Palestinian people. But this week he was in the background, generally agreeing with the decisions worked out by others.

President Sadat and President Assad met to try to further the reconciliation begun at their meeting in Saudi Arabia last week. Only a few months ago, stu-dents here were carrying signs ridicul-ing President Assad's name, which means lion in Arabic. Yet when President Sadat met the Syrian leader at the airport on Sunday, the two kissed on the cheeks in the Arab tradition and laughed at each other's jokes, as if the Egyptian agreement with Israel on Sinai last year and the Syrian intervention in the civil war in Lebanon had never come between them as a cause of tension and dispute.

Another major rift in the Arab world is the one between Egypt and Libya.
The Libyan leader, Col. Muammar el-Qaddafi, had announced that Libya would boycott the Arab conference, presumably because the Libyan revolutionary leader did not want to come to Cairo. But Mr. Arefat, who needed all the support he could get from hard-line radical states like Libya, presuaded Colonel Qaddafi to send at least a low-level delegation. When the Libyans arrived on Monday, just at the end of the first session, diplomats and reporters were startled to find at its head Foreign Minister Abdel Moneim el-Huni, who fled from Libya to Egypt a year ago after a dispute with Colonel Qaddafi and then was living in Rome. Syria and P.L.O. Said to Renew Military Links in South Lebanon

By HENRY TANNER Special to The New York Times

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Oct. 26-Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization, whose forces fought a bloody battle in the mountains above Beirut only 10 days ago, were reported today to have resumed some of their previous military coopera-tion in southern Lebanon. That is an area that Israel wants to keep free of Palestinian guerrillas.

According to Lebanese right-wing Christian sources, Syria has agreed to reopen the so-called Arafat Trail, the customary supply route from Syria to the Palestinian forces in southern Lebanon.

The trail is also the northern access road from Syrian-occupied eastern Lebanon to the Arkub, the slope of Mount Hermon that was the main staging area for guerrilla attacks against Israel before the Lebanese civil war began more than a year and a half ago. [Syrian soldiers clashed with Lebanese Christian militiament at Rum in southern Lebanon Tuesday, according to Christann and Palestinian sources, as quoted by The Associated Press, Three Christians were reported killed and 12 wounded, but the reports did not say what had touched off the veapons supplied to them by Israel, blocked the more direct access road to the Arkub from the west a week ago when they captured Merj 'Uyun, a garri-son town about five miles north of the Israeli border.

The opening of Syrian supply lines to the Arkub is not expected to lead to a Syrian-Israeli confrontation, even though it may create tension in the border area. The security belt that right-wing Christian forces have established with Israeli help is to the east along the border from the Mediterranean to the area east of Merj Tyun. The supply lines through Syrian-held Lebanese territory will be under the control of the Syrian Army, which will thus be able to a large extent to limit or to direct Palestinian operations. Control over the Palestinian guerrillas has been one of the main goals of the Syrian intervention in Lebanon. Such a goal, it is believed here, is approved by the United States and indirectly by Israel.

Palestinian officials indirectly con-firmed the reports of Syrian-Palestinian cooperation regarding the south. They said that Yasir Arafat head of the P.L.O. and the Fatah guerrilla force, had raised the issue in Damascus on his way to a meeting of Arab leaders in Cairo and had received a promise of support from President Hafez al-Assad.

The speed and extent of the Syrian-Palestinian accommodation has come as an unwelcome surprise to the Lebanese right-wing Christians.

Sources in Ashrafiyeh, the Christian center of eastern Berrut, said yesterday and today that they feared an alliance between Syrian and the Christian leaders had run its course and that the Christians could no longer hope to obtain Syrian

No other career shifts emerged from the meeting of the Central Committee, which is the agency that endorses changes in the leadership. Average Age of Polithuro Is 66

MOSCOW, Oct. 26—The policy-making Central Committee of the Soviet Commu-

Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party wound up a two-day session today with some personnel changes that left the senior leadership ranks intact. Despite a flurry of speculation that shifts were impending the only significant promotion was that of Yakov P. Ryabov, the party leader of the industrial region of Sverdlovsk in the Urals. Mr. Ryabov, a 48-year-old former engineer, was brought into the party's national secretariat, which with the Politburo constitutes the inner circle of the Soviet leadership.

led to rumors in Soviet circles that he might step down or replace President Nikolai V. Podgorny, whose post is less demanding.

Mr. Kosygin's health has since improved, according to Soviet sources, and last week he reappeared to greet an arriving Mongolian delegation. But he is said to be still working only a few hours a day, with, the rest of his workload presumably assumed by the two First Depaty Prime Ministers, Kirill T. Mazurov and Nikolai A. Tikhonov.

in view of his experience with heavy industry in Sverdlovsk, it was thought that Mr. Ryabov was being prepared to take on the supervision of the military industrial complex that Dmitri F. Ustanov handled before he was named Minister of Defense last spring.

In a subtle way, the introduction of Mr. Ryabov into the leadership group confirmed the strong patronage position of Leonid I. Brezhnev, the party's general secretary. Mr. Ryabov worked his way up through the Sverdlovsk party apparatus once headed by Andrei P. Kirilenko, now Mr. Brezhnev's deputy.

Mr. Kirilenko expressed the philosophy prevailing at the top on receiving a second award of Hero of Socialist Labor, the highest civilian decoration, after his 70th birthday in September.

"It is good that in our country this is considered only middle age," Mr. Kirlenko said.

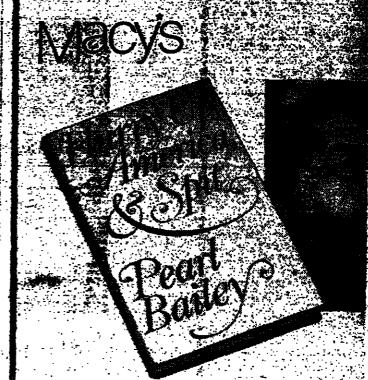

The recent illness of Prime Minister Aleksei N. Kosygin, reportedly precipitated by a water accident last summer, had led to rimors in Soviet circles that he might step down or replace President.

The text was presented by Leslie O. Harriman, the Nigerian representative, on behalf of more than 50 sponsoring countires. Mr. Harriman told the Assembly that independence for the Transkei was a culmination of South Africa's policy of setting up racially separate bantustans, or tribal homelands, and added:

Indicative of the strong sentiments among Africans in particular was the Assembly decision to waive its customary 24-hour waiting rule on new resolutions. Additionally, two leaders of black liberation groups in South Africa were permitted to speak from the Assembly prostrum. In the past the officials are resolutions and the control of rostrum. The South African delegation is not participating in the Assembly, but an official who happened to be in the building said the Transkei was as deserving of independence as more than a third of the United Nations members on the basis of size, national income, population or

NEW TOUGHER STANCE

One of the new commercials seems to reflect elation over recent polls indicating that the Conservative-Republican Senator has narrowed the lead held by his Demo-cratic opponent, Daniel P. Moynihan. However, the Senator said the commer-cial had been made before release of the poll results and was almost exactly like one he did six years ago.

"It's upbeat, designed to be inspirational," Senator Buckley said of the commercial, which shows him surrounded by admirers as a voice says the people are "joining the swing to Jim Buckley."

The two other new commercials reflect the aggressive attack that the Senator, until recently low-key, has adopted against Mr. Moynihan. One shows a piggybank being smashed with a hammer as a voice says that "Professor Moyni-han's schemes" would take $60 a week 'out of your paycheck."

The third commercial quotes "Professor Moynihan" as having said that "black Americans should be treated with benign neglect," and that "starving Americans are idiots who deserve to starve."

The Buckley campaign will spend at least $60,000 on the 30-second commercials, which ran last night locally and will be shown all over the state.

The commercials were shown to an audience of 100 workers and volunteers for the Buckley campaign, reporters and a dozen sandhogs in workclothes and proper activities for 20 years and under investigation by the Federal Government, announced yesterday the resignation of 11 trustees as part of "a major reorganization" of its board of trustees.

The resignations, coupled with one last month, mean that 12 of the 16 trustees have left under pressure of threatened Government action against them. The resignations are the result of the largest Federal push against the union since James R. Hoffa, former Teamster president, was sent to prison nearly a decade ago.

Still undecided is which II trustees will go and which four will remain. The pen-sion fund said that the names of the new members would be announced

In the two weeks since the trustees decided on the mass resignation, fierce infighting has reportedly occurred within the pension fund over who would resign. and the matter still has not been settled.

Indications are that Frank E. Fitzsim-mons, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, will be one of the four who will remain on the re-structered board, which will have only 10 members-five from the union and five from the trucking industry.

No Deals Made, U.S. Aides Say .

Federal officials said that no deal had been struck with the resigning trustees to absolve them of civil or criminal liability for past actions. But sources said that the trustees were quitting in part to end any liability for the continuing consequences of previous loan practices.

"This restructuring follows extensive discussions between us and representa-tives of the fund," said a spokesman for the Labor Department, which has been spearheading the government's investigation into the Central States, Southeast and Southwest Areas Pension Fund.

"In those, our special investigations staff expressed serious concern about the continued presence on and control of the pension fund by the prior board trustees," he said. "This became particularly acute because a number of their major loans are reaching a point calling for some critical decisions. We didn't have faith that those trustees had the competence. willingness or ability to make those decisions prudently.

"They realized that their continued presence as trustees would be a factor in determining possible individual civil liability with respect to any one of them." At one point in the negotiations, a Fed-

Echoes of exhilaration were reverberating among most participants as they left Detroit for home. The extraordinary meeting had produced dozens of bold resolutions on issues of justice. Calls for changes in the church's views toward divorced and remarried Catholics passed resoundingly, as did recommendations to ordain women and married men.

There were immediate outcries of protest as well, and the president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops moved to calm fears that the conference could produce radical changes by re-asserting the hierarchy's right to control

The delegates also appeared eager to provide an example of openness and candor to offset an image of the church as overly cautious, as if they felt they were making history.

North Atlantic Winter Bargain Rates Affected—Economy and First Class Stay the Same

By RICHARD WITKIN

President Ford approved yesterday a Civil Aeronautics Board decision granting the airlines some increases in winter-season promotional fares on the North Atlantic but rejecting other major ones that the carriers had sought.

The decision meant that, unless there are diplomatic complications, there will not be the customary winter-season reductions on such fares as the 60-day advance-purchase, the 7-to-8-day group fare, and other special bargains.

There will be only half the customary winter reduction on 22-to-45-day excursions, and the full winter reduction will be enforced on the normal economy fare. Furthermore the sirlines will not be able to implement proposed increases in firstclass fares, which do not have seasonal Under the new fare schedule, for example, the advance-purchase round-trip from New York to London will stay at the current shoulder-season rate of $325 instead of dropping to the old winter rafe of $295. The youth fare will stay at $441 instead of dropping to $387.

The 22-to 45-day excursion fare will drop from $432 to $397, instead of the previous winter level of $363. The normal economy fare will take the fall customary winter drop—from $626 to

Under the three season concept, fares are at a peak in the June-August summer season, come down for the September-October and April-May "shoulder" periods, and normally are at their lowe the relatively slack winter season.

That being so, the way was open for individual carriers to set their own fares, subject to required governmental approvals. In this country, the aeronautics board simply did not find that all the increases the airlines sought had been justified. In its opinion, handed down last Friday the five-member board said it remained convinced that "over the longer term, the objective of improved revenues for the industry lies in basic structural reform rather than in increased fare levels within the present unduly complex structure." Two board members, G. Joseph Minetti and Lee R. West, filed separate statements arguing that the board should have disallowed all proposed winter-season increases on the ground that the airlines had failed to give adequate justification for the higher fare levels.

Airline sources raised the possibility that fare levels for trips originating in Europe would be different from the ones set by the aeronautics board. They said across the board, and that the higher levels had already been approved in some burg Prison, 500 are re-Another possible complication was the

The success of the campaign tactic and the fact that polls show the tax issue hurting the Democrats in New Jersey has encouraged the publication of a special edition of the Ford campaign newspaper written with Mr. Byrne's public image

"Gov. Carter, like Gov. Brendan Byrne, increased his state's budget 50 percent while in office," the newspaper states, and, in another paragraph it says: "Carter's idea, like Gov. Byrne's, is to provide employment through government jobsin some cases patronage jobs—which every hard-working taxpayer must pay for."

Mr. Carter sampled the antitax sentiment during an appearance in North Beren last Saturday. His speech was all but drowned out at times by the shouts of tax opponents, and Mr. Byrne's name

Special to The New York Time WASHINGTON, Oct. 26-The chairmen | fied fully about the matter to Mr. Rodiof the Congressional committees that no's and Mr. Cannon's committees at his recommended Gerald R. Ford's confirmation hearings in 1973.

In separate telephone interviews, Representative Peter W. Rodino Jr., Democrat of New Jersey, who is chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, and Senator Howard W. Cannon, Democrat of Nevada, who is chairman of the Senate Rules Committee, said that their committees did not have access to subsequently disclosed information about the incident when they conducted Mr. Ford's confirmation hear-

They referred to the disclosure in mid1974 of a Sept. 15, 1972, White House tape in which the then President, Richard M. Büxon, ordered his staff to have Mr. Ford, then the House minority leader, take the lead in blocking a Watergate investigation by the House Banking and Currency Committee.

They also mentioned recent statements by John W. Last Wednesday, Attorney General Edward H. Levi rejected a request from two Democratic Representatives, Elizabeth Holtzman of Brooklyn and John Conyers Jr. of Michigan, for a new investigation of allegations about Mr. Ford's role in blocking the 1972 investigation. Senator 'a Little Uneasy'

"I must say I was a little uneasy when the President said that we had cleared him as far as that matter was concerned, Mr. Cannon said. He noted that the Senate committee had acted on the informa

Mr. Leggett is virtually certain to win re-election.

The challengers' soft-pedaling of scan-dal involving incumbents is also apparent in the Second Congressional District in Utah. The incumbent Democrat, Representative Allan T. Howe, has been convicted of societing for prostitution.

Yet his Republican opponent, Dan Marriott, did not even mention the issue

In contrast, Representative James R. Jones, the Democrat from the First Congressional District in Oklahoma, has re-peatedly been branded as "a crook" by his Republican opponent, James M. In-hofe. Dole, at a Rally in Ohio, Modifies His Position on 'Democrat Wars' could deliver his prepared speech. Mr. Dole had all but echoed the Carter position he was attacking.

While President Ford was campaigning in Pittsburgh, his running mate went to Erie to assist in the fight for Pennsylva-nia's 27 electoral votes.

Using a speech patterned on the one the President delivered this morning, Mr. Dole continued to sound the theme that his party hopes will win the election— that the Republicans represent peace through strength; while the Democratic Presidential nominee "offers a defense based on weakness and a foreign policy based on inexperience and innocence."

As an example of what he called Mr Carter's "innocence or ignorance," Mr. Dole quoted to a downtown rally what

Dole quoted to a downtown rally what he said was Mr. Carter's position in the last debate with President Ford: "I would not go to war in Yugoslavia even if the Soviet Union sent in troops."

That, Mr. Dole said, proved that the Democratic candidate had "learned nothing from history, nothing from the mistakes of the past or else be doesn't care."

"As a potential President," Mr. Dole continued, "he has tipped his hand to enemies and to potential enemies alike, telling them in advance what he will or telling them in advance what he will or will not do if he becomes President. That is no way to conduct foreign policy."

The texts of the prepared speech had been handed to reporters traveling with Senator Dole before his arrival here. At a brief news conference at the airport immediately after he landed, the Senator was asked whether he would consider sending American troops to Yugoslavia

"The answer is no," Mr. Dole declared,
"but I wouldn't tell them in advance what I had in mind."

I had in mind."
Apparently, it occurred to him before he delivered his speech at the courthouse here that he might have stumbled, because he made a point of telling the crowd that he had been asked the question at the airport. "I would never tipmy hand to an adversary on foreign policy." he insisted. he insisted

But the Senator, outwardly undismayed, danced a few steps of the polka with one of the costumed young women under a blown-up plastic Mickey Mouse that hung beneath a Ford-Dole banner.

Mondale Campaigns in Albany ALBANY, Oct. 26-Before Senator Dole revised his position on the subject today, Senator Mondale had demanded that President Ford's campaign organization renounce Mr. Dole's characterization of World War II. The Democratic Vice-Presidential nominee, on an 11th-hour swing to some of his party's strongholds in key Eastern states, interrupted his attack on Mr. Ford's economic policies to address him-self to Mr. Dole's remarks.

Asked during a news conference at the airport here why he believed that Mr. Ford should take it upon himself to disavow Mr. Dole's assertion, Mr. Mondale replied that the two were "responsible for each other," and added, "Mr. Ford picked Mr. Dole, as I recall."

The Dole assertion about "Democrat wars" was interpreted by Mr. Mondale as a "desperate effort" by the Republi-cans to gain ground in the week that remains before next Tuesday's Presiden-

The best one-two combination in sportscasting

What more do we have to say about Mary Albert after Yessss? He is the most popular sportscaster this town has ever had. Mary is our voice and also the voice of the Knicks, Rangers and Giants. So Marv has a big edge in getting the behind-thescenes sports news fast.

If Marv is sportscasting's superstar, then John O'Reilly, the guy we've teamed him with, is its Rookie of the Year.

John is new to New York, but in Northern California he was voted "Sportscaster of the Year" five times in the last six years. That's like having a lock on the MVP trophy.

Before that, John actually worked for Charles O. Finley, which qualifies him for awards of another kind.

Marv's on NewsCenter 4 between 5 and 6 every day, John between 6 and 7.

The New York Times

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

We may have remarked a few hundred times that there is almost no food known to man that, given a purse of sufficient size, cannot be purchased in America in or out of season, be it Australian kangaroo tall, scotch grouse or reindeer from Finland. One rare and notable exception is a delicacy, peculiarly Italian, that will be available in this country for a short period begin-ning this week. That exception is fresh white truffles, one of the most extraordinary luxuries ever to touch a person's palate.

The coterie of those who relish white truffles place them on a scale above and beyond the black variety. And whereas black truffles—frequently referred to as black diamonds—have a cool elegance and sophistication, white truffles have a lusty, sensual, earthy taste and odor that have been described variously as decoder. described variously as decadent if not to say indecent or obscene. One gas-to say indecent or obscene. One gas-tronome, quite aptiy we think, has called the rich perfume of white truf-fles "necrophilic."

Some years ago we wrote an essay on white truffles, noting that the har-vest, most of it in the Piedmont and Le Marche regions of Italy, begins in late September and ends in late No-vember or early December. Like wine grapes, the harvest fluctuates from year to year, and the news for 1976 isn't good. We recently spoke to Paul Urbani, the largest importer of white

The current "crop" of fresh white truffles, those gnarled marble-like fungi that are one of the most extraordinary luxuries ever to touch a person's palate, won't be great this year. That means that just one of them may cost as much as $66.

truffles in America, and he said that the current "crop" promised to be on a fraction of what it has been in years

Meeting the White Truffle

We have reflected often on our initial association with white truffles. We were seated alone one Christmas dinner in Passeto's Restaurant in Rome. Quite honestly, it occurred to us that we were in the presence of something unfortunate. The odor came first from the left, then from the right, and then we realized that the guilty object was a brownish-white thing like a beige-colored, gnarled marble. A waiter was grating it onto a dish of creamy fettinging

Shortly thereafter we made the error of sampling white truffles on that celebrated pasta, and we say "error" in that from that moment on we have been hopelessly addicted to the taste. The cost of white truffles, like that of caviar, augments from year to year, and at present the cost of white trufand at present the cost of white truit-fles is somewhere in the stratosphere. According to Mr. Urbani, this year's going price is $288 to $400 a pound. There are approximately 6 to 12 white truffles to a pound, so the cost of one white truffle will range this year from about $24 to $66. They are considerably more expensive than caviar, which is now selling for a mere $98 to $130 a pound (14 ounces Russian weight).

We have often recalled with a combination of amusement and distress an incident that was one of the saddest moments of our life, and it involved a few white truffles. The truffles, by the way, are so highly aromatic that one of them goes a long, long way. Saved for a Special Occasion

Some years ago we received as a gift a few white truffles that even then must have cost something like a stone from the crown jewels. Being of generous nature, we decided we would not indulge in a selfish solitary feast. We would save them for some special occasion, perhaps with black tie and champagne and very special guests, a few who would know what white truffles were all about.

Well, the obvious happened. We stored them in rice (the traditional method of storing white truffles; the rice absorbs the flavor) in a plastic container and put them in the re-frigerator. We drove to New York and the cleaning woman came.

"Lord help us," she said, "I never knew things could smell so had. I threw those things in the East Hamp

the board of CBS. It almost goes without saying th the audience for white truffles will I limited not only because of the odor, but because of their scarcity ar cost as well. That merry widow top has lots of possibilities—with shorts, with big, floucy skirts and with bloomers. Bloomers? Call them zouave pants. Call them plus fours. Bloomers will do. They're full pants, gathered below the knee, and they work in terry cloth as well as more exotic silks with those laced-front

They were part of a show replete with high drama as well as comic re-lief, plenty of folkloric motives (North African this time), practical clothes in-terspersed with such things as seethrough skirts. Besides the laced bodices, there were laced belts. Nineteenth century music hall and contemporary sports clothes. Tiered skirts in every length. A big, merry potpourri of fashion, emphasizing the fantasy and the fun. No wonder the poor man was ex-

The Saint Laurent collection was a standout, but not by default. There were other good things going on Valentino, for instance. He didn't show any mini clothes, but that wasn't why his collection was so appealing.

He devised what must be the most attractive opening act in Paris.

Clad Entirely in White

His entire crew of models, male and female, made their debut on a rising stage, like an orchestra. They were grinning and swaying to Latin American music. They were clad entirely in white off-shoulder blouses, tiered skirts, ruffled petticoats, aprons— things like that. They were supposed to represent Brazil, but they looked like a clean-cut bunch of kids from

Later, they changed their clotheswarm browns, bright greens, blue and purple had their scenes, then back to white again—while they danced to the fado best. And at the end an ovation for the Rome designer who has taken to showing his ready-to-wear in Paris. The showing overlapped the Kenzo presentation, and in a rare gesture of cooperation, the Kenzo organization held off for a half hour so the Valentino audience could get there.

True to his threats, Kenzo showed virtually everything short. "He's really socking away at the micro-mini," somebody muttered. He's also hedging a bit, since a number of the dresses were hiked up and bloused over a hip belt to make them look micro. Some of them were really below the knees.

the shapes are usually very big and loose, gathered at the shoulders. When the hip belt is added, they acquire an insouciant little girl look, sometimes a 1920's look, except of course for the micro-minis, which are in Polynesian prints, or the asymmetrically draped

Gold Touches

The serious couture houses are trying desperately to find the ready-towear beat. Christian Dior managed quite nicely. Marc Bohan threw in some gold touches-a gold lamé sash here, some lurex tank tops there. He showed strapless dresses for sunning or dancing, wide necklines that fell off the shoulder and a smattering of short clothes, including Bermuda shorts and cotton skirts exactly the same abovethe-knee length, Both had straps at the sides to adjust the waistline, a useful idea that looked attractive, too.

The best thing at Dior is a skirt that fits smoothly at the hips and whooshes out below. Good for day or night, it looks Caribbean without being too primitive.

The front row at Dior was occupied by the presidents of Bonwit Teller, Saks Fifth Avenue, Bergdorf Goodman, I. Magnin, Neiman-Marcus, Bloomingdale's and Holt, Renfrew.

It's a change from the social types and actresses at the couture shows, and an indication of how important retailers across the Atlantic consider the ready-to-wear shows here.

Givenchy, who showed his collection in his couture salon instead of a large hall or theater, turned the place into a rain forest to suggest the proper resort atmosphere for summer clothes. He had a single-lined dress in crinkled cotton, and a lot of bare midriff styles for evening. The tops sort of wrap around and tie. His strapless dresses had separate sleeves, like bridesmaids mitts. But basically, the collection was devoted to quiet clothes, which he

Ann Buckley Forsakes Privacy to Campaign for Husband and His Philoson

Arn Buckley is a very private person who has gone public.

She has, for the sake of her husband, given up a degree of the anonymity she cherishes, although she won't deny that a little of that gift of privacy is selfish. She wants her husband in public life because he mirrors her philosophy, and most of all, because she considers him an honest man

"We very much want to win," she says, her blue eyes looking directly at the person to whom she is talking. To assist, if not insure, his victory, sfie campaigns three days a week on her own, in addition to making appearances with her husband. She attends coffees that turn into lunches and teas and sometimes dinners. She shakes hands and smiles, and through the thin, rather ascetic face, a political being emerges. The new being is somewhat of a surprise to the old one, who was a quiet, self-contained debutante named Ann Cooley before she was a quiet, self-contained suburban housewife.

"The little bit of campaigning I did last time left a good feeling," she said. "I'm not as frightened now. I'm more accustomed to the life and I'm freer now that the children have grown. Lye done a good deal more this time and I've enjoyed it."

Mrs. Buckley's conception of her role has changed little in her 23 years of marriage. Her duties have altered, particularly in the six years since James Buckley was elected a Senator from New York, but the philosophy has remained constant

""I perceive my role to be myself," she said firmly. "My role is also to support my husband because I like to

"The two younger boys are still in school in Washington, but I've thought for years what I would do after the kids went away, and I'm distressed that I don't know," she said. "I don't think that an identity as a husband's wife is enough. It's fine to play house and

The most appealing choices of the moment are activities connected with religion, children or music, "but I haven't found anything yet," she said.

Seeking Lost Elegance With Crocheting as Art

Crocheting today is far from being all afghans and baby booties. In the last decade a small number of craftsmen have chosen this technique as a medium of esthetic expression. Much of what is being done is in the funk vein, But Mona Costa, a young, self-taught crochet artist who started as e painter, uses her cro-cheting as a kind of departure into lost elegance.

There are some mad, crocheted creatures and a whimsical landscape or two in the one-person show she is now having at the Cordy Gallery. But it is in the sensuous and elaborate abstract hangings, and in some of the little jewel cases and reticules, that one best gets a sense of the opulence and intricate patterning that characterize her most interesting work.

The flat hangings, many almost shield-shaped, could be studies for fantastical chasubles. Using a variety of yarns, from wool and linen to silk, ribbons and metallic threads, she creates a complex interweaving of curved lines, and embellishes the pieces with objects from some old treasure box antique lace and fringe; bits of epaulettes; silk rosettes; metal beads; feathers; and round mirror insets.

Her work, priced from $50 to $1,800.

can be seen at the Cordy, 324 East 73d Street, through Nov. 6.

Kilims, those flat-weave rugs of bold color and geometric design, are becoming almost as well-known today as the more traditional pile Orientals. But the kind most people know best are the rugs woven by nomadic tribes of Cen-tral Asia, or the kilims of North Africa. What is not as well known is that Poland has for centuries had a tradition weaving tapestry-style rugs. The Polish kilims were, and to some degree still are, a peasant art, seen most often hanging on the walls of a simple cot-tage where they provided visual warmth and kept out drafts. At the same time, however, much more elaborate kilims, usually of a floral nature, covered the floors of aristocratic residences.

Cepelia, the Polish folk art shop at 63 East 57th Street, is now having an exhibition of the kilims of Maria Ja-nowska, a top designer of tapestry rugs in her native country, who will be demonstrating her technique each day. Her work seems to combine all the Polish design traditions, from charming folk figures and peasant motifs to bold abstractions, ranging over a broad color spectrum. The rugs, from area to room size and priced from $120 to $900, can be seen through Saturday.

She admits to being a conduit to the extent that "I make sure what goes out goes through Pat." She also admits to trimming his schedule because "you can't be in the Bronx at 10 o'clock and in Brooklyn at 10:30" and "you can't spend every last minute shaking hands and still respond to the issues."

Which explains why Mrs. Moynihan is doing some heavy hand-shaking her-self in these final days of senatorial campaign, stumping up and down the state urging supporters to work for the "dead broke" Moynihan campaign to

Not that she feels at home on the political platform. No, after working in eight campaigns, she says she still prefers to be "in the back of the room counting heads or something." She was counting votes at headquarters when, on the morning after his close primary race, Mr. Movnihan scampered onto the platform to give a victory speech their daughter Maura, 19 years old, on one side, their younger son, John, 16, on the other—and grinned and called out across the crowd: "Hey, I had a wife when I came into this campaign."

Mrs. Moynihan grinned, too, as she recalled the scene. "I don't choose to be a public person," she insisted. "You know, the more public Pat has become the more adamantly private I have felt.

Still, it may not be every family's notion of normalcy. Mr. Moynihan's far-flung careers-from professor to presidential adviser to ambassador-have resulted in 16 family moves.

"But Pat has nothing to an investigation moves," Mrs. Moynihan said, waving moves, "I mosquito. "I

"I didn't want to go to Washington and I didn't want him to go," she said.
"There was no evidence that Nixon would be receptive to his ideas on poverty and race. I thought he'd be chopped up and sent home on his shield, which he was."

The Nixon days were one of the few subjects to make Mrs. Moynihan visibly angry during a long and rambling interview.

"The black thing hits me very hard," she conceded, referring to the Moynihan memo to Mr. Nixon suggesting "benign neglect" of racial rhetoric. The suggestion was widely interpreted by blacks as counseling "neglect" of black problems.

'This is a total misrepresentation of his life, of his commitment, of what he has tried to do and succeeded in doing, in many cases," she said.

Mention of abortion also angered Mrs. Moynihan. The Moynihans, who are Roman Catholics, do not condone abortion, Nor do they condone raising the issue in a political campaign. Nevertheless, it has become one since Senator Buckley, also a Roman Catholic, favors a Constitutional amendment that would return control over abortion to the states. Mr. Moynihan says he would not favor an amend-

"I think it's terrible that anyone would try to make it a political issue," she said. "You're going to polarize people. You're not going to help the problem, you're going to make it worse by discussing it in an election."

If Mrs. Moynihan's views seem to parallel those of her husband, so indeed does her background. Both are from humble Irish families—Hell's Kitchen in his case, the outskirts of Boston in hers. Both were raised virtually without fathers, went to work at an early age, worked their way through college and came together in Democratic politics.

Most people respond to this problem by shopping around, by going to a few stores or dealers and listening to the sales priches. In the end, their buying decision is often as much a function of impulse as carefully considered rea-

There is a better way of buying, a way that may consume some time, but which is well worth it for the person interested in getting the best quality for the best price.

A Visit to Showroom The first thing to do is visit a store or showroom well-stocked with differ-ent brands. The purpose of this visit is to get some feel for what is on the markt and at what price, and to begin to determine what features are desired. Listen to the sales clerk, jot down some prices and model-names and numbers.

Likely places to have this index, which has been publishe since 1973, are li-braries of large universities and central branches of municipal libraries. In New York City, the index is available at the mid-Manhattan branch of the New York Public Library at 8 East 40th Street at New York University's Elmer Holmes Bobst Library in Washington Square, and at Teachers College Library at Columbia University at 525 West 120th Street.

New Shops, Uptown and Downtown, Cater to Those Who Like to Eat Well

By MIMI SHERATON

To lovers of good food, the arrival on the local scene of even one shop offering original and delectable specialties would be considered welcome news. But to have two such newcomers in town is cause for a full-scale celebration, a time to eat and rejoice. About five years ago, Christi Finch. and Eileen Weinberg met and discovared they shared a passion for cooking. On that basis, they began a catering service that they ran after their normal working day, and that grew into an unqualified success, simply by word of mouth. When they finally decided to give their full time to cooking they ecided to call their shop Word of

The small, bright, pleasant shop, in operation for just one month, is so thuck full of irresistible morsels, so fragrant with the siren scents of the cooking they do on their big Garland range in the open kitchen, that customers instinctively begin to want to eat something as soon as they enter.

"They pick up some of the buttery crisp rugelach pastries filled with auts, cinnamon and sugar, or a chewy brownie studded with walnuts, or a flaky croissant, in a desperate attempt to forestall starvation.

Stuffed Grapevine Leaves

Taking turns at the stove, each to produce her own specialties, Miss Weinberg, and Miss Finch specialize in cooked appetizers, soups and main courses, international in scope, but most identifiably Mediterranean. I can't remember ever having better stuffed grapevine leaves, glossed with lemon and filled with cinnamon-scented rice pilaf ($2.25 a half-pound).

- There is a hearty, coarse, garlic- and brandy-flavored pate de campagne, once slightly undersalted, the next time sheer perfection ($2.25 a quarterpound), and cut-up chunks of firm white scallops dressed in a mustardy rémoulade sauce ($3.20 per half-pound). The jewel-like assorment of salads includes carrots and pink beans à la grecque, crunchy string beans vinai-grette, gentle ratatouille a bit bland in flavor but easily re-seasoned at home, and a ziti salad with mayonnaise, soothing with sliced ham or turkey though not quite in keeping with the more sophisticated assortment.

There is a really gorgeous chicken salad ($2.75 a half-pound), too, flecked with tiny slivers of celery and tossed in dill mayonnaise with nutrneats. The only flaw to my taste were the raisins. easily picked out but somewhat out of character; if the salad is ordered in advance, they can be left out Creamy fresh mushroom and barley soup was delicious and other daily soups include split pea and ham, and black bean. ($2 a pint). Mild lean pink ham baked with an apricot glaze is sold sliced ($3.30 per half-pound) and there are daily entree specials such as beef explorated a sliced fillet of beef. beef carbonnade, sliced fillet of beef, and a really marvelous chicken curry with currants and raisins counterpointing the cayenne pepper bite in the homemade curry powder. The powder, by the way, is also sold here for home use, as is cous-cous grain that would be perfect with the curry, which is more Mcroccan in inspiration than Indian, although it contains no vege-

A Seasonal Specialty

Among the several types of mousses, the cloudlike pumpkin, well-perfumed with allspice, nutmeg, cinnamon and cloves is especially suited to the season. ($1.60 per portion.) The only spe-cialty not up to par was the honey-nut torte, a thin golden cake made not with honey but doused with a thin sugar syrup in the manner of a savarin, making the cake itself much too soggy for

The big jars of brandied fruits put up in summer will soon be ready to be sold and served over holiday puddings or ice cream and a few gifts such as baskets, potholders, jams, biscuits and the like, will be added to as time goes on.

Among the many cheeses, try the extraordinary gaperon, an earthy specialty of the Auvergne, cured with garlic and black peppercorns and not for the fainthearted. . Word of Mouth also does special-order cooking for parties, and will make any of its mousses in customers' serving bowis. The shop, at 147 East 72d Street, is open seven days a week. The phone number is 734-9483.

In another vein entirely, the Red Herring, opened only two weeks ago, is a tidy, sparkling white shop that cele-brates herring, in all its infinite variety. The Swedish-born proprietor, Paul Sandblom, is still expanding his array, but he is already well on the way to having all of the basics of a true Scan-dinavian herring table, usually includ-ing 25 to 30 varieties at its most com-

Gravlaks, the delicate dill-cured salmon, is always on hand, and is as moist and silken as it should be. The price ranges from $2.25 to $2.60 a quarterpound, depending on wholesale prices. True herring connoisseurs will appreciate the more esoteric gravad mackerel ($1.25 per quarter-pound), the silver and sapphire skinned fish filets that become meltingly tender in their sugar, salt and dill marinade. Salt-cured salmon, really a sort of homemade lox, is made on the premises and has a bracing saline edge to its flavor and a satiny sheen when sliced paper-thin. Whole, snow white schmaltz fillets, pickled in the Swedish style with spiced vinegar and minced onion fairly cry out for accompaniments of boiled new potatoes, fresh sour cream and minced chives. The French smoked her-ring fillets marinated in thyme-scented olive oil and gilded with grated carrots, need no further garnishing. Both types are $1.10 each.

For Doctors' Wives, Clouds But No Silver Linings

LOS ANGELES—To many women, marrying a physician means financial security and social prestige. To others, however, it means a short, unhappy marriage that ends in divorce.

"Everyone thinks that doctors' wives have it made," said Roberta Weintraub, the wife of an Encino, Calif., physician.

"They look at your beautiful home and lovely car and think that your only problem in life is deciding whether to allow tennic trains are three times. play tennis twice or three times a week. They don't realize that marriage to a physician is not all glamour and excitement. Doctors' wives often are lonely because their husbands have such demanding schedules, and this can lead to divorce."

"Divorce is becoming increasingly common among physicians," said Dr. Edward Stainbrook, a psychiatrist and chairman of the department of human behavior at the University of Southern California medical school. "A genera-tion ago, the divorced doctor was the exception, now he is almost the rule."

"Although nobody has done a study documenting the trend, it appears that doctors and their wives no longer feel compelled to continue a marriage that they find unfulfilling simply because they think that the profession demands it," Dr. Stainbrook continued.

While no one, including the Census Bureau and medical societies, has collected statistics pointing toward a high divorce rate among doctors, physicians interviewed agreed that such was the case. One doctor here said that every doctor in his department at a major hospital here was either divorced or in the process of getting divorced. A lack of dating experience may contribute to the high divorce rate. "Doctors tend to marry the first women they date." said Dr. William Skilbeck, a clinical psychologist at the University of California at Los Angeles. "As undergraduates, they are too busy studying and worrying about setting studying and worrying about getting accepted to medical school to get to know many-women the way their class-mates do.

"By the time they reach medical school, they regret never having had a social life and try to make up for it by getting married in record time.

They often married in record time. They often marry women totally wrong for them because they don't know themselves very well."

Once they finish their training it is often even harder for physicians to meet even harder for physicians to meet women with whom they have common interests because they are so they get a divorce.

"Infidelity is often a problem because medicine is a glamorous profession and so many women are attracted to doctors," Dr. Nolen said. "Because doctors deal with questions of life and death, sexual affairs sometimes don't seem as much of a big deal to them as to their busy establishing a practice.

Dr. William Nolen, a Litchfield, Minn., surgeon and author, believes that single women or their mothers often pursue eligible doctors because "thou want a considerary who expressed in they want a son-in-law who earns lots of money." (The average office-based physician earns $60,000 a year according to a recent survey in Medical Eco-

"Although women's liberation has helped somewhat, there are still many women who want to marry doctors because on the surface, marriage to a physician looks like a soft, easy life," Dr. Nolen said. "It rarely is because doctors' wives have to assume most of the responsibilities for caring for the children and the house because the doctor is too busy taking care of his

"Doctors' wives have to put up with loneliness, adjustment to irregular hours, the doctor being home too little, and the telephone ringing constantly. Many women say they married for companionship and aren't getting it, so and residents have risen considerably in the last 10 years, many doctors still find themselves indebted to their wives for their education. This is apt to cause marital discord if the wife feels that she sacrificed her own career to support her husband's studies.

A typical example is that of Am, a 44-year-old mother of two who dropped out of college and joined the secretarial pool at the hospital where her husband did his training. After he finished his residency in heart surgery, he divorced her to marry a young graduate student.

"The reason he gave for the divorce was that we were no longer intellectually compatible," said Ann sadly. "I resent that because I could have been the person he and I both wanted if only I could have finished art school." Leslie, a slim brunette in her early 30's, separated from her doctor-husband for different reasons.

"I got tired of being alone," she said. "He was always too busy at the hospital to devote any time to me or our son. I had a Mercedes and a house in Bel Air but I didn't have love and affection. My child felt as though he were an orphan because his father was always too busy to take him to football games or Cub Scouts. I'm single auw but I'm less lonely."

Ann also found marriage to a physi-

"Doctors are difficult people to live with because nobody ever says no to them," she explained "They are used to having their way at the hospital and they expect their wives to jump to their commands the way patients and nurses do. The problems of a doctor's wife always seem trivial to the doctor."

More doctors may be amenable to divorce these days because their incomes enable them to support two households without sacrificing a middle-class way of life. A salesman who earns $15,000 a year may be unhappy, but he cannot afford to divorce his wife as readily as can a neurosurgeon who earns $100,000 a year.

Roberta and Louis Weintraub have managed to surmount the difficulties of combining a demanding profession with family life. Married for 12 years, they have true children and are years. they have two children and are very interested in sports and politics.

"Marrying a doctor is a little like being First Lady," said Mrs. Weintraub, who was employed by the Democratic Party in New York City before her marriage and now works for a California legislator. 'People always think of you as Mrs. Doctor instead of a person who has her own identity.

"It is very difficult to establish a career when you are a wife of a doctor because employers refuse to take you seriously. They cannot imagine why you would want to work when you are married to someone who earns so much money."

Dr. Weintraub added, "One of the most promising trends I see is that more and more doctors' wives are going to graduate school, starting businesses, finding the fulfillment and the prestige that doctors take for granted in their work."

New York Food Prices

The greatest overall food price decline in the past six months was reported here yesterday by Consumer Affairs Commissioner Elinor Guggen-

As a result, she said the cost of feeding a New York City family of four last week dropped 96 cents from the previous week. And at $70.51, she noted, it was 2.2 percent below the market basket cost a year ago when it was $72.12.

"We are very pleased to be able to report that abundant supplies of grain, sugar and pork caused the greatest overall food price decline we've seen in the past six months," she declared.

Mrs. Guggenheimer added that the reduction in wholesale prices was finally being reflected on the retail level and that "we are hoping that this trend will continue."

The Commissioner's reference to abundant supplies was backed up by the United States Department of Agri-

Like It or Not, Bordeaux Puts Up With Change

BORDEAUX, France, Oct. 22—Change comes very slowly to this dignified old city. True, there now are motels on the outskirts and even a plasticlooking Frantel Hotel in a redeveloped area near the center of town.

But the wine industry, the city's pride and burden since the Middle Ages, still moves with the speed of the oxen that were still used in the vineyards just a few years ago.

There have been changes though, all" of them prompted by the traumatic economic blows that laid the business low in 1973 and 1974 and from which it still is struggling to recover.

Wine Sold at the Chateau

Almost two decades ago. Alexis Lichine shocked the staid Bordelais when he erected a sign on the main wine route through the Médoc. It was not a gaudy sign; it merely pointed the way to Chateau Lascombes, which he and some other people then owned. In the Médoc, one simply did not adver-

Now, Mr. Lichine has several signs that not only direct the curious to his Chateau Prieuré-Lichine, but also make counting the British, the Germans and even some French."

True to the St. Emilion reputation for hospitality, tourists have always been more plentiful there than in the Medoc or Graves, but they have become so numerous that there is talk of creating a full-time tourist office.

The increase in visitors has created a new problem for the growers providing wine for tastings, "We simply cannot provide tastings of Chateau Haut-Brion for every busload of visitors," said John Delmas, the manager of Chateau Haut-Brion. "It is simply far too expensive."

Lesser chateaus and the shippers in Bordeaux, many of whom are still overstocked, do not have this problem. but the famous wines are the ones the visitors want to sample.

The tourist influx has certainly helped the sale of Bordeaux wines in the United States, but what the Bor-deaux merchants refer to irreverently as "dumping" by American importers has belped even more. Stuck with huge inventories and a public turned off by huge prices, big American im-porters have been cutting their losses and selling famous wines cheap. So

Still the Bordelais are grateful for small favors, and wine is selling, in part because they are working hard to sell it. A small group of five or six chateaus including Fourcas-Dupré in Listrac, have come together informally to help each other. One of the owners is always on the road, selling the wines of the entire group.

Other owners have taken to direct mail. Alain Querre, the owner of Chateau Monbousquet in St. Emilion, places advertisements in several French maga-

it clear that his wine can be bought there. While few of the staid Medocains have gone that far yet, signs announcing the whereabouts of the famous chateaus are popping up all over the place.

And not a few of the managers are ready and willing to part with a few bottles at a proper price. (The proper price, by the way, is no bargain. In fact, most Bordeaux prices are higher than they are in New York-even at the chateaus. An American army officer stationed in Germany reported paying $25 for a bottle of the 1970 Chateau Mouton-Rothschild while visiting the chateau recently. Checking later, he found that the price in New York was $24,75.1

There are more tourists in Bordeaux these days and the wine people are hoping to lure more, and this is a considerable change from past policy.

The wide-windowed tour buses, filled with plump, middle-aged Americans, are more and more a familiar sight in the various wine districts of the Bordeaux region and, for the first time, the growers and merchants are beginning to work out plans to make touring more interesting.

"We have a least one group a week from the States," said Comte Leo de Malet Roquefort, the owner of Chateau la Gafflière in St. Emilion, "not

The Clock Is Ticking

The Bordeaux wine people are happy to see a renewed interest in their wines in the United States, but they know the clock is ticking. One day the stocks of 1970's, 1971's, 1972's, 1973's and 1974's will be gone and so will be bargain prices.

"What happened in 1973 could happen all over again when the 1975's come on the market," said Philippe Cottin, manager of Chateau Mouton-Rothschild. "All our costs have gone up and French inflation is still fierce." "The prices the consumer has been paying in the States do not reflect the market. He is in for a shock when the 1975's go on sale."

Where the Dead Live On

By FRANCIS X. CLINES

Moving to final rest at 65 miles an hour, the last remains are trundledeastward from the city along the Long Island Expressway to Exit 49, where the cortege's headlights beam southward through the fall sunshine to Pinelawn, the great suburban resting place for the urban dead.

The cemeteries growing there seem as secure, neat and organized as suburban subdivisions. First comes the Na-tional Cemetery for war dead and vet-erans where small, uniform headstones are set in hypnotic ranks and files, and where newcomers must first be re-ported to something called the Interment Control Center.

Next door, there is the modernistic memorial park where death is not so much proud as pruned — where the earth appears to be kept virtually seamless and mortality is understated on ground-level plaques. Then follows the religious cemeteries, plains of stonework with a few touches of individuality, but with a general silhouette of death as rectangle.

A visitor sees that, however democratic and polite the newer resting places, there never has been a place for stylish ever-aftering to match Green-Wood Cemetery in Brooklyn, the city's first rural cemetery, designed 125 years ago when Manhattan life first seemed encroaching and grief seemed more a public event.

It has turned out better than some other planned neighborhoods. Great shade trees that creak in the autumn wind anchor the hills of the cemetery's 500 acres. Waterfront life stretches out below, and all about stands a village of the dead inside and under Gothic, neo-classic and eclectic structures in many ways as strange as life itself.

It is still painful to hear of the death of Charlotte Canda who died in 1845 on the eve of her 17th birthday when her father left the horse and carriage momentarily unattended and she was carried off, fatally careening.

She stands in stone, as a saint on an altar, her image dressed in her birth-day-ball gown, in an elaborate setting she designed with the thought it was for an aunt, a monument her father decorated with 17 rosebuds and other numerical reminders of Charlotte.

All these years later it is permissible to smile the smile of a Victoriana buff appreciating the towering, almost rantappreciating the towering, aimost ranting stonework and the sense of portrayal survivors had in the 19th Century. So smiles Gary Reynolds, an art curator at the Brooklyn Museum, who loves the cemetery.

"They reveled in death back then," he says, moving through lanes of weather-scarred allegory—the broken roses, draped urns, reaped wheat, frayed nautical lines, inverted torches that rise up like chords from a pipe organ. "They loved to mourn, and funerals were events as big as births."

The point is made in limestone at the century-old grave of Jane Griffith, who is depicted at the door of her town house saying goodbye to her husband a she heads for work.

The detail includes a horse-drawn trolley near the house; she was killed on such a routine day by such a vehicle. The monument has told the deadly ending of her story, the same way a sinking ship is depicted at the grave of the Brown family which lost six members in a long-ago drowning.

Green-Wood was conceived as a prestigious place to rest, and the wealthy who bought tracts there sometimes picked out their monuments

while still in bloom, choosing a favored Continental stonework, perhaps, while making their vacation grand tour. Some even put things in place during life and used the setting for picnics with family and friends.

Mr. Reynolds thought the most elegant of these to be the expansive setting of William Niblo, who ran an entertainment palace, Niblo's Gardens, at Broadway and Prince Street. His gravesite, with a sweeping stone wall and staircase, vases, the figure of Memory sighing nearby and a great mausoleum covered by ivy, still looks like a good place to throw a party.

Some newer graves at the cemetery are Pinelawn plain and seem truly grieving with red lamps, "eternal" as long as there is electricity, sticking from the ground not too far from the great stone resting place of John Mackay, the early communications scion, whose direction to supply heat to the mausoleum has been carried out for decades, according to Mr. Reynolds. Name droppers can have a busy day in Green-Wood, ranging from Horace Greeley to Joey Gallo. Boss Tweed— William M. on his markr—has an im-pressive family plot under perpetual care, and his own stone is darkly oversized, as if designed by Thomas Nast.

Like all good cemeteries, Green-Wood stirs fresh questions about life. Why did Isaac H. Brown leave us 94 years ago with a towering statue of Pythagoras marking his remains? And exactly what was intended by the pyramid scene at the remains of Van-Ness Parsons, where a sphinx and a Christian figure seem to watch each

The shaping of final words are as interesting as the carvings. William Waring's stone expresses Biblical hope: "I am the Resurrection. ." But the neighboring stone of Frederick Waring seems more pleasantly humble in its perspective: "I would not live alway

I ask not to stay."

Fair enough, but in his sense of how quickly each of us flickers, Frederick Waring made sure he had a handsome place in Green-Wood for his remains. A hundred and ten years ago in this newspaper, a column similar to this told of some of the strivings of that day and ranked the cemetery thusly: "It is the ambition of the New Yorker to live on Fifth Avenue, to take his airings in the [Central] Park, and to sleep with his fathers in Green-Wood."

Style-minded New Yorkers have since found other places for living and for airing themselves, and in these circles death is, as elsewhere, a drag. But should the need arise to approach the subject obliquely, through the darkly pleasing glass left behind by others, there stands Green-Wood.

West led the heart three.

Soloway, John Swanson, Eddie Kantar and Bill Eisenberg, who thereby earned the right to compete in playoff matches next January to determine the 1977 North American world championship team. The diagramed deal helped them to win the national final in Salt Lake City in August.

South's two-heart bid when one club was passed around to him showed a good hand with game prospects there would be no reason to employ a weak jump overcall in the balancing seat. North accordingly raised to game, and Eisenberg as West made a shrewd lead of the heart three. Resisting the inclination to lead the inclination disposal and a substantial singleton diamond paid a substantial dividend.

The declarer won the first trick with the trump king and returned a trump. Eisenberg won with the ace and after considerable thought led a club, knocking out dummy's ace. South could now have succeeded by drawing the missiance succeeded by drawing the missiance succeeded by drawing the missiance and taking a diamond 5. ing trump and taking a diamond finesse, but he had no clue to the location of the diamond king.

Instead the declarer not unreasonably played West for that significant card by taking the ace and leading a diamond toward dummy. He was not pleased when West discarded Kantar in the East position captured the diamond jack with the king and led the spade jack. West won and continued the suit for South to ruff. The declarer tried leading the club ten and would have made his contract against a sleepy defender. But Eisenberg cov-ered with the queen, forcing the dummy to ruff, and the heart nine was established as the setting trick

In the replay, West made the more obvious lead of the singleton diamond and South had no trouble in making 10 tricks after winning the first trick in the dummy with the jack. He played trumps, and lost one spade trick, one heart trick and one club trick since East had no entry to give his partner

Wherever Fran Tarkenton went he made touchdowns, money, friends, commercials and new corporations... Pe if Francis Tarkenton has become the video-age version of a legend, he is still a man... The All-Pro quarterback and a veteran sportswriter 🦨 speak, in alternate chapters, about players, feuds, money, memorable games, and the mythologies and delusions of pro football.

Are you concerned about losing your job/getting a divorce/infla-tion/death? (See page 39.) Do you feel quity about your sexual fantasies, feelings, or acts? (See page 100.)

Do you equate who you are with what you do and how well you do it? (See page 47.)

Do you avoid certain activities because they will make you appear culine or unterpinine? (See page 155.) Are you dissatisfied with your appearance/intelliger sional success/luck with the other sex? (See page 40.)

If you answered "yes" to even one of the above questions, chances are you are not striking out for the adventure, excitement, yes, even ultimate peace you were meant to have. Why? Because you have erroneous zones, your own destructive behavior patterns-like anger, worry or fear-that are holding you back.

You can be whatever you choose to be. And since the choice is yours, why not go for self-fulfillment and success rather than depression and fears of failure? It's a whole lot easier than you might think. And Dr. Wayne W. Dyer proves it in this breakthrough book of psychological discovery. Each chapter is aimed at you-much like a personal therapy session. And on page after page you'll see yourself in the author's concrete examples and constructive case histories. You'll discover how to identify and expose your own . erroneous zones, and with the help of easyto-follow plans, eliminate them forever.

If you've heard or seen Dr. Dyer on radio or television you already know what a dynamic, successful counsellor and therapist he is. If you haven't, this book is all you need, It is written by a psychologist who has achieved and continues to achieve all his goals in life and set new ones. His thesis is amazingly simple: you are what you choose

Dr. Dyer decided several years ago that he was through with colds-and he claims to be so. He also underwent root canal work rith no anesthetic and willed away the pain. Most people do not understand what their minds can do. If it can do all these things,' he reasons, 'it can certainly get rid of every erroneous zone that you have." - from an interview in The Atlanta Journal

In one of many prime vignettes, he describes a supper on the balcony of a rich person's house: "It stood near a very busy crossroads, and there was a touch of melancholy and maybe even pathos to that supper on the balcony: it was cold, the noise of the traffic was deafening and the schaust fumes deafening, and the exhaust fumes easily reached us. But everyone ignored all that, as if determined to hold on or -return to a way of doing things that had been so easy and pleasurable

Mr. Koning remarks that, because all the papers are confined to Government propaganda, there is a "new silence" in Cairo, a tacit refusal to talk seriously about Egypt. He sees the country as one in which the king was toppled in the country and the seriously about the serious of the serious true revolutionary fashion and the people, again faithful to revolutionary tradition, never took over. The bureauctradition, never took over. The bureaucracy now in power has decreed that there are to be "no development plans at the expense of the present generation." Outside the Egyptian Museum in Cairo, the author had this confirmed:
Men were making bricks in the same way as on the hieroglyphs inside.
In the showier part of the new Cairo,
a great square stands half finished, "a

President el-Sadat's press secretary delivered an eloquent speech for Mr. Koning, to the effect that the lotus in bud symbolized Lower Egypt, and the lotus in flower Upper Egypt. While Cairo was once regarded as the city of sin, it is now moving in the opposite direction. The belly dance which used to be a choreographed orgasm, now resembles, in the author's opinion, the Royal Canadian Air Force Exercises.

A 'High' at the Pyramids

The Nile Hilton has a "Taverne Bar," labeled "La Belle Epoque, the Gay Nineties." The Meridien, a modern French hotel, has so many different kinds of apparatus at work to counteract the environment that when you sit on the terrace to gaze at the Nile, "you get the sound effects of being on a motor boat." Not everything Egyptian has been vitiated however: In a mosque, Mr. Koning found not "the quiet of our churches, where you may feel you are on the sidelines of life..." but "the quiet of some inner chamber of decision." At the pyramids, in spite of all the ballyhoo that surrounds them, he experienced what he could them, he experienced what he could only describe as a "high."

While "A New Yorker in Egypt" is not excessively given to moralizing, the author does leave us with this thought in regard to Egypt's previous status as a British protectorate: "What colonialism leaves behind," he writes, "is a highly developed instinct for self-preservation escapiem an urge to he preservation, escapism, an urge to be happy as the former masters seemed to be happy, and according to their recipe."

Issue: The Human Condition

On Aug. 12, 1974, three days after he took the eath of office, President Ford told a joint session of Congress: "As Vice President, I studied various proposals for better health care financing. I saw them coming closer together, and urged my friends in the Congress and in the Administration to sit down and sweat out a sound compromise. . . . Why don't we write -and I ask this with the greatest spirit of cooperationa good health bill on the statute books before this Congress adjourns?"

It was the first and last appeal by President Ford to-move ahead on national health insurance. Mr. Ford's subsequent loss of interest in the matter is tharacteristic of his general view of the Government's rolle in shoring up the human component in the nation's resources. His record in the entire field of health, education and welfare suggests an absence of policiesunless consistency in the use of the veto can be considered a policy.

Whatever lethargic reference the Ford Administration made occasionally to the question of health care was confined almost entirely to the necessary but by itself inadequate coverage of only catastrophic illness.

That long-ago glimmer of hope for effective welfare reform presented by the Nixon Administration in its early years has long been extinguished in the Nixon and Ford Administrations.

in education, the ax was ever ready against any such extension of child care and development. When Mr. Ford "with some reluctance" refrained from vetoing the omnibus higher and vocational education bill earlier this month, his attitude spoke eloquently of his lack of understanding of the real needs of higher education.

The President's objection to a more realistic increase in Basic Educational Opportunity Grants for college students from their present $1,400 limit to $1,800 speaks for itself; his opposition to a clause that would at last provide some direct institutional aid to colleges which enroll large numbers of scholarship students shows little comprehension of the campuses' plight. In the elementary and secondary schools, the Nixon-Ford reliance on revenue sharing rather than on specific aid programs has, in many localities, led to a deterioration in efforts to improve the education of the poor.

The challenges in these fundamental areas are of overriding importance, not only to the human beings involved but to the nation's economic strength as well. Even in the absence of any master plan, Jimmy Carter has responded with greater compassion and realism to these issues. His general promise of governmental reorganization would undoubtedly include - perhaps begin with—a streamlining of the unmanageable colossus of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Governor Carter is committed to the gradual increase of the Federal share in dealing with the cities' present welfare burden. He lays emphasis on maternal and child health and on preventive health care, in addition to catastrophic illness insurance. These programs would be considered as only a foundation for more comprehensive national coverage, once Federal revenues are bolstered by full employment and tax reform.

Messrs. Ford and Carter have both rightly underscored the nation's basic strength. But it is in the broad domain of health, education and welfare that such strength must be nurtured and extended to increasing numbers of Americans. It is in those areas that so directly affect the human condition that the nation's overall strength is being most seriously undermined by enclaves of festering poverty, ignorance and inequality. This is why the issues of health, education and welfare call not for a policy of veto and wait, but for affirmation of the kind of action indicated by the Carter program.

At Stake in Geneva

The only visible basis for hope for the conference on Rhodesia that opens tomorrow is the fact that all the white and black leaders invited by Britain have come to Geneva to participate. If their private negotiating positions were as rigid as their public postures they would hardly have bothered to make the long trip north.

Ian Smith, Prime Minister of the white minority Government that declared Rhodesia's independence from Britain eleven years ago, continues to insist that he will accept no changes in the proposals for a transition to majority rule that he accepted from Secretary of State Kissinger last month. But he has been told by both Britain and the United States that what he represerits as an immutable "package" is really only a basis for negotiations.

Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe, the two most important of the four black Rhodesian leaders participating say for the record that they have "completely rejected" the Kissinger plan, "about which we were not coffsulted." But in coming to Geneva they have in fact accepted the first two of the five points in that plan: the principle of majority rule within two years and a conference to set up an interim multiracial administration to serve until a majority Government can be establisted under a new Constitution.

is difficult to envision the blacks accepting two propositions which Mr. Smith insisted on adding to Mr. Kissinger's plan before he would approve it. These specit a white chairman for a Council of State, which would be charged with writing the Constitution, and call for whites to hold the ministries of defense and law and order in the interim Cabinet. Compromises on these issues are not inconceivable if, behind the public camonading, there is a genuine will on both sides to negotiate a peaceful evolution.

Britain and the United States obviously count heavily on Prime Minister Vorster of South Africa to keep Mr. Smith in line and on Presidents Kaunda of Zambia and Nyarere of Tanzania to help prevent the rival black leaders from getting into sterile competition to see who caff make the most extreme demands on Rhodesia's white regime. Britain has endorsed one black demand for immediate release of hundreds of black political prisoners held without trial by Mr. Smith's Government.

Despite the pre-conference skirmishing, both London and Washington are keenly aware that the Geneva gathering represents the most serious attempt in many years -and perhaps the last opportunity-to arrest the drift toward major racial conflict and possibly great-power intervention in southern Africa.

For such enormous stakes, both Governments presumably are ready to make extra exertions and take political risks to bring off a breakthrough at Geneva.

save the $1.5 million a year it costs to operate thereity's five special high schools for pregnant students, a decision was taken in February to close them. Then the bureaucracy went to work.

Somebody decided that since the special schools were to shut down at the end of this term, no new students would be enrolled during the current school year. Some students were sufficiently motivated, after being turned away from the special schools, to attempt to register in the schools to which they would ordinarily have been assigned. Then came Catch-22; they weren't allowed to register there either.

Thanks to Councilwoman Carol Greitzer and the responsiveness of Chancellor Irving Anker when he finally focused on the problem, enrollment in the special schools has been reopened and the girls who would have had no place to go now have a school to attenduntil the end of this semester.

If the bureaucracies go back to operating on an as usual basis, very little thought will be given to the question again, until sometime near the beginning of the second term, when the schools will face the problem of what to do with more than 2,000 pregnant students. The Chancellor's decision ought to be viewed as the beginning of a three-month opportunity to find a solution for these girls other than closing all five of the schools now avail-

A Tax Break for Cities

In the pastiche of tax reform provisions just signed into law, there is one real reform that will have a substantial effect on cities. It has been Federal tax policy until now never to give a landmark an even break. The law has rewarded landmark demolition by making it tax deductible and added insult to injury by providing for accelerated depreciation on the replacement.

As a result, cities are pockmarked with parking lots and studded with high-rise mediocrities that are testimony to the astuteness of property owners who know a tax break when they see one. Occasionally a site is marked with a plaque for the superior structure that stood there, but more often the only indication of the irreparable erosion of the urban environment is in someone's tax returns.

The powerful negative impact of this kind of tax policy has finally been recognized. The rehabilitation of commercial landmark property has now been put on an equal footing with new construction. Demolition of a landmark is no longer deductible, and its replacement will not get accelerated depreciation. A rehabilitated landmark will be eligible for the same rate of write-off as a new building.

These Federal changes are a good start. At the local level, cities continue to reward with lower assessments those who tear down or neglect buildings, and to penalize with higher taxes those who improve older structures. As long as vacant land is taxed at a lower rate, sound, handsome buildings will be leveled. New York's tax incentive program for converting older structures to residential needs is a move in the right direction.

But the results of bad policies are an all-too-prevalent physical reality. It has become painfully clear that tennous neighborhoods can be ravaged by tax-created parking lots and the lack of rehabilitation tools. Tax reform that encourages conservation is sound urban policy. Cities are built and destroyed as much by laws as by men.

Autumn Woodland

There are two times in the year when one can scarcely stay indoors. In the spring, when the buds are about to burst, and now, soon after the first hard frost.

The color in the woodland hasn't really vanished, but most of it now is down out of the treetops. Walk in the woods and you walk in color, ankle-deep in crisp gold and crimson. Roadsides scuffle with it and every breeze seems full of leaves. Stand beside a clump of sumac and the leaves are so loose your own breath will bring them down. Under a red oak there are so many leaves it seems impossible there are so many still on the tree.

An open field may be a tangle of goldenrod and milkweed, brown stems and withered leaves and leaves like beaten gold, but the gray goldenrod fluff is like mist on every breath of air and the gray-green milkweed pods spill shimmering streamers down the wind, Wild grape climbs a fencerow maple seedling, the tan grape leaves with a texture like that of a paper napkin. Few grapes are left. With luck you may see the purple-stained possum that ate most of them.

At the roadside stands a tree nobody ever bothered to prune or pamper. It is a box elder, country cousin of the sugar maples, leafless now but loaded with tan tassels, keys like those on the maples but borne in bunches. It will hold those keys, and their edible little nuts, all winter, for hungry birds and small animals. It has no special autumn color, but it is as much a part of the season as the oaks or the gold and orange and

Foreign Policy: A Case Against Carter

To the Editor:

The most astonishing aspect of this Presidential campaign is the fact that a major political party should nominate a candidate for the Presidency whose experience and exposure in foreign policy is virtually zero.

This is no reflection on Mr. Carter as a man since I have no doubt that his keen intellect is capable of absorbing rapidly the many facets of international problems. In my mind, at least, foreign affairs must take precedence over domestic policies, it is in the sphere of foreign policy that we have as a nation so often stubbed our toes. I believe that President Kennedy. a charming, capable and idealistic young man, stumbled into the Vietnam quagmire because of his relative inexperience in matters international.

I em also mindful of the fact that in this century the Democrats have been a war-prone party. Indeed, it seems that peace is a luxury we have been able to afford only under Republican Presidents. Every Democratic President in this century has presided over a war. Eisenhower and Nixon between them extricated us from two of them. This suggests to me that the preservation of peace requires more than the idealism or good intentions of a Wilson or Kennedy; rather, it demands more of the tough-minded realism of a Humphrey or Nixon, which can come only through experi-

Democrats prate about the lower unemployment rate under their Administrations. What they fail to tell the people is that this has been due to the incessant wars we get into when they are in power. Wars generate their own brand of prosperity; it is much more difficult to achieve prosperity during peacetime.

With due respect to Mr. Carter's obvious capabilities, I do not think it To the Editor: is wise to entrust him with the conduct of foreign affairs, fraught as they are with innumerable dangers. The undeniable fact is that we have peace under Mr. Ford's steady hand. We ought to keep it that way.

'Flawed' Support for Ford

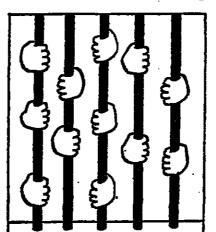

To the Editor A self-styled "ex-McGovern supporter" tells us in her letter [Oct, 17] that she will vote for Ford primarily because Carter's leadership is open to serious question. She then asks us to spend the next four years "getting our communal heads together . . . if only Ford can just hold us steady." We have seen several recent examples of that steadiness on issues such as grain price supports, supersophisticated weaponry sales, the hegemony of Fastern Europe.

How valid is her argument on leadership? No candidate exists on his or her own, Ford is a product of the Republican Party, just as Hoover was in 1932. We had no trouble with that election despite our ignorance of Roosevelt's abilities, leadership or otherwise. We knew where Republicans stood on subjects like unemployment, and we know where they stand

Of course we should listen to suggestions from former supporters of Democratic candidates. That they may be Republicans is an important consideration in evaluating their recommendations. In the present instance, I find our ex-McGovern supporter's thinking, if not suspect, then certainly WILLIAM MEYERS New York, Oct. 19, 1976

To Punish by Death To the Editor: As is not unusual, a Times editorial

has missed the point. Your Oct. 7 editorial on capital punishment questions whether society has the right to take a life in retribution, and comments that "there is little evidence that capital punishment is a more effective deterrent than long-term incarceration." The two questions do not belong together.

Governments have always had the right to legislate on the basis of inconclusive information. The issue is not even whether the death penalty should be preserved. That is surely an important question which deserves serious and sober reflection. The issue is rather who ought to do that reflect-

For the Supreme Court to decide that the death penalty is unconstitutional would have consequences far beyond declaring such punishment "cruel and unusual" (a view in which the Founding Fathers certainly would not have concurred). It would be tantamount to saying that no government has the right to inflict a penalty of death. But there is clearly a difference between what we have a right to do and what we think it is best to do at a given time.

The Court may have jurisdiction with regard to the former. The latter is, and ought to be, the preserve of legislative bodies. To deny the right to punishment by death is not to make government more humane, unless we make the regrettable assumption that humaneness is identical with impo-MICHAEL P. DAVIS Alfred, N.Y., Oct. 7, 1976

To the Editor: Roy Meador's letter (Oct. 19) refers to the death penalty as "revenge." Those who advocate the death penalty believe that its deterdissuade notential murderers. Do the opponents of the death penalty have any solutions to the problem? Revenue Sharing: The Better Plan

To the Editor:

Your Oct. 15 editorial "A Handout Is No Policy" misses the point entirely. The General Revenue Sharing bill which the President signed in Yonkers cannot be considered in a vacuum, but rather in concert with block grant programs, including the 1974 Housing and Community Development Act, which even the Democratic chairman of the Senate Housing Subcommittee described as "landmark" legislation. To say, as The Times did, that "the substitution of ... block grants merely gave state and local political establishments more money with which to conduct business as usual" is to ignore completely that the whole thrust of that act is not to conduct "business as usual," Grants under this program are apportioned to communities on the basis of population, poverty and overcrowded housing, and unlike the old categorical programs, it requires cities to develop and implement both a community development plan and a housing assistance plan in order to receive such funds. These plans require cities to set forth needs and to state how they plan to address those needs over a three-year period. Even Mr. Carter has endorsed the Administration's block grant approach, and few mayors would disagree. General Revenue Sharing is not a program to maintain the "keepers of the status quo," but rather to help our cities maintain their fiscal solvency while the block grant programs address their most pressing and critical local needs as determined not by Washington bureaucrats but by locally elected officials whose first-hand knowledge of those problems and priorities, I can assure you, will always exceed that of the most knowledgeable Washington bureaucrats. Furthermore, these funds enable localities to pay for police protection, transportation and education without raising property taxes, which constitute the source of 85 percent of local funds. We all know that excessive taxation of property has led to abandonment and disinvestment, which are the most frequently cited symptoms of urban CARLA A. HILLS

WASHINGTON-A moderately successful grain harvest this fall may hull world leaders into a faise sense of security over the world food situation. Few realize that even this year's promising crop will do little to rebuild depleted grain reserves.

Recently available data for death rates during the food-scarce years for Bangladesh, India and several African countries underscore the urgency of rebuilding food reserves. As food prices rose, in a situation of scarcity, so too did death rates, taking a heavy toll among the poor, young and elderly.

The impact of global food scarcity on Bangladesh is particularly harsh. Like most poor countries, Bangladesh does not have good vital statistics, but the International Cholera Research Laboratory has kept meticulous birth and death records for Matlah Bazar, the largely rural district in which it is Twice during this decade food shortages have been followed by severe nutritional stress and loss of life. Daily per-capita cereal consumption fell to near-starvation levels in 1971 because of adverse weather and the war with India. The death rate for Matlab Bazar jumped by 40 percent; accepting a Ford Foundation team's assumption that it is a representative district, an extrapolation for the entire country indicates an additional 427,000 deaths.

After two good crop years, extensive flooding caused the harvest levels to fall again. A Bangladesh representative at the 1974 World Food Conference, in Rome, implored the international community to come to his country's aid. But because additional food-relief exports would have further raised food prices in the supplier countries, the response was belated and inadequate; consequently, Matlab Bazar's death rate climbed again, this time suggesting a nationwide increase in deaths of 333,000.

Bangladesh has suffered in company. In 1972, uncommonly poor harvests in several key countries led to an absolute decline in world grain production of 3 percent. The Soviet Union imported nearly 30 million tons of grain, tying up most of the world's exportable wheat supplies. United States crop levels sank below average, and the Indian subcontinent reaped one of its poorest harvests in years.

Unable to obtain enough food from abroad, India stood by helplessly while food consumption dropped. Poorer Indian states were the most severely affected; death rates climbed in Bihar, Orissa and Uttar Pradesh in 1972, claiming about 829,000 lives. Nationwide, the toll was far greater.

Outside Asia the sheer numbers of people caught in the often fatal food squeeze were fewer, but the plight of the hunger-stricken groups was, if anything, worse. The drought in the Sahelian zone of Africa had fastened its grip well before the outside world finally began to take notice in mid-1973. According to testimony before Congress, perhaps 100,000 to 250,000 lives were lost-no one will ever know for sure.

An equally grisly crisis was unfolding in the mountains of Ethiopia. There, the famine became even more serious as efforts were made to keep it a secret from the outside world. One of the most costly, life-consuming covereventually claimed some 200,000 lives.

Wherever acute food shortages have occurred, their demographic effects have followed a common pattern. The countries most devastated by food scarcity were the poorest ones, and, within these, the poorest groups-landless laborers in Bangladesh, those in India's poorest states, nomads in the Sahel-have paid the highest price.

Without adequate food reserves, the international community has lost the will and the wherewithal to effectively respond to crop shortfalls in individual countries. The world community, led by the United States, was able to stave off major famine during the 1950's and 1960's, most notably in India during 1966 and 1967, when the United States shipped one-fifth of its wheat crop there. Unfortunately, without adequate reserves large-scale unilateral rescue efforts of this sort are no longer possible.

Only the United States, with its tremendous production and export capacity, can take the lead in establishing an international food reserve. Led by the Department of Agriculture, we have dragged our feet during the two years since the Rome conference, often squabbling over details. The human cost of inadequate reserves has now been documented. A world without food reserves is a dangerous place for the poor.

The Hair Factor

By C. L. Sulzberger

PARIS-During the decidedly mediocre political campaign that is now winding up in the United States, practically every aspect of the candidates -their views, habits and personalities -has been discussed except the length of their hair. We know something about Jimmy Carter's suppressed libido and also something about the kind of moral outlook tolerated in Jerry Ford's family.

We have been told in profusion and also in some confusion about twiceborn and thrice-born religious conceptions, about Democratic batting averages and about battered Republican knees. We have heard more than the usually anticipated share of noodleheaded gaffes. But the matter of tonsure has been artfully dodged by experts of each party.

Is this silence occasioned by a bald fear of sudden exposure - the embarrassed realization that a ticket is either too hirsute or not enough? Those who have read their history books are clearly aware of the political implications that can on occasion be read into unfashionable tonsorial style.

The Goths, in ancient Europe, wore hair long while the Romans, who ran the show, clipped theirs. Consequently a haircut meant disqualification from the higher offices of state because the obvious inference was that a Goth who went to the barbershop was trying to pass himself off as something he wasn't or that he was a collabora-

During the latter part of the 19th century the Yi Dynasty in Korea prohibited men from wearing long hair knotted in the hitherto chic fashion. The present chief of the Seoul Government, President Park Chung Hee, has banned relatively similar hairdo's (sometimes locally referred to as "hippie-style").

He warns offending males that if they violate this ban by allowing their locks to cover their ears or reach their collars, they will go to jail. Kim Seong Jin, President Park's Minister of Culture, lucidly explains: "We don't want youngsters to grow long hair. It's bad for mental and physical hygiene."

The military junta which ruled Greece from 1967 to 1974 was very much down on hair, among other things. Greeks-and even young visitors from abroad-faced a choice between prison, deportation or a quick haircut.

Throughout the early years of this century it was a tradition to think of : revolutionaries, above all those advocating violence, as exceedingly hirsute ; -long locks, beards and mustaches. Perhaps this derived from vague recollections of the luxuriant heads of Marx : and Engels.

While the hairy innuendo of Communism-anarchism was definitively abandoned a few years later-perhaps because there were so many wars in which soldiers were closely shorn so keep them free of lice-hair has revived as a political issue during the past decade or so.

For the most part, the long-haired young men and even longer-haired young women-especially in the Westem world-have come to be associated with the general idea of protest: protest against practically anything, just so that things don't remain as stodgy as they seem to be.

A cursory glance at some of the leading contenders in next week's election would seem to hint that the Democrats are subtly seeking to emulate the role of the well-tressed Goths who didn't aspire to collaboration with the Romans, or to be shaggy protestors of a more recent era who just don't like the way things are going.

Nobody could shout at Jimmy Carter with any justification that he should go off and buy himself a violin case. but he is definitely a shaggier contestant than President Ford, whose dome_ is but thinly covered and, at that, by a neatly trimmed vestigial mat. The only really distinguished Republicans with adequate foliage on top whose heads come readily to mind are John Con-..... nally and young Steven Ford, neither of whose names appear on any party-

Probably the outstanding Democrat, when viewed through the optic of the hair factor in politics, is Ambassador Pat Moynihan. Analyzing Joblessness

By Alfred J. Tella

WASHINGTON-At 7.8 percent, the unemployment rate today is almost twice as high as that of 20 years ago. Although the unemployment rate asures fairly well what it intends to measure, intervening events in the last two decades have affected the comparability of the data.

In 1961, President John F. Kennedy's Council of Economic Advisers made an important decision. The period from mid-1955 to mid-1957 was considered the golden age of unemployment that the country should strive to return to. In those years there was no war, hardly any inflation, and the unemployment rate was 4 percent.

Everyone seemed to agree that the advisers had done a good thing, and the 4 percent figure stuck in the public's mind. But so many things have happened since the golden years that it's not really proper to compare the unemployment rate today with that of two decades ago.

To determine how much worse unemployment is now than then, we must put the unemployment rate back on its old track, by adjusting the rate up or down to account for those factors that cause trouble for people who like fair comparisons.

Today, there is in the labor force a higher percentage of women and young persons, who always have high unemployment rates, even in good times, because they shop around frequently to find the job they want. If the labor force today had the same age and sex composition as 20 years the total unemployment rate would be nearly a point lower.

In the 1950's, when employment rose, memployment usually fell by as much as the rise in jobs. New jobs were taken mainly by the unemployed. Today, when employment rises, a larger percentage of the jobs are taken by people attracted from outside the labor force. So with a smaller percentage of new jobs now going to the unemployed, the unemployment rate falls by less than it used to, even when employment growth is just as strong. The increased tendency for workers to enter the labor force when job opportunities improve has added as much as a point to the unemploy-

In 1972, Congress decided that mothers receiving welfare who were able to work had to register for work. The memployment rate of welfare mothers jumped in 1972-73, even though unemployment generally was falling. The job-registration requirement probably added about 0.2 to the total unemployment rate.

In 1974, unemployment insurance was extended by 26 weeks, and previously uncovered groups became eligible. Unemployed workers could look for a job longer and still collect. Lengthened unemployment probably increased the total unemployment rate by half a point or a point.

A recent program, Supplemental Unemployment Assistance, provides benefits to unemployed workers not eligible for regular unemployment insurance. This program apparently kept some schoolteachers and others in the working force who would normally have dropped out during summers, possibly raising the annual unemployment rate by two-tenths of a point.

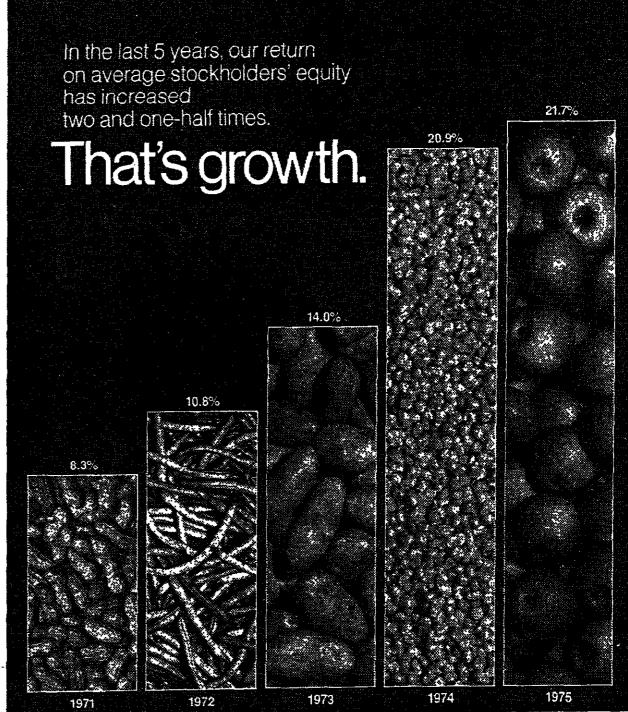

Response errors occur in the data. as when one person in a household mistakenly tells a Government interviewer that others did not look for work. If taken into account, such errors would increase the unemployment rate by about four-tenths of a

Today, there are new Government programs that create job opportunities for different groups. Two of these are the Public Service Employment and the College Work Study programs. Enrollees are counted as employed even though they are not in marketcreated jobs and many would otherwise have been unemployed. In the absence of these programs, the total unemployment rate would probably be several tenths of a point higher.

Other factors may have influenced the memployment data, such as extension of the minimum wage (employers find it more expensive to hire teen-agers in jobs that may not be worth higher pay), but the experts haven't come up with any usable estimates to adjust the unemployment rate. And those influences we know something about are continually changing in importance.

All in all, a good guess is that the unemployment rate comparable to 20 years ago is probably 2 to 2.5 points less than currently reportedmore like 1.5 times rather than twice as high as the 4 percent rate of the golden mid-1950's.

Now that he's not there physically, but spiritually, I can see him more clearly as an artist. I can even see him at his work table, sitting up very straight and handling the brush like a stylus." William Kaufman, founder of the William Kaufman Organization and head of one of the major real estate and building families that helped reshape the city's skyline in the postwar period, died yesterday at North Shore University Hospital in Manhasset, L. played a leading role in the rebuilding of Third Avenue. His company built the first high-rise office building on that avenue— 711 Third Avenue, at 44th Street—while the old Third Avenue El was still in operation.

Entering the real estate field in 1924,

Mr. Kaufman was among the first to embrace the fledgling Federal Housing Administration program in 1935. It guar-anteed loans for private houses and Mr. Keufman's company was said to be the first to obtain such loans in New Jersey for private-house construction in the Saddle River area.

Later Mr. Kaufman turned his atten tion to constructing commercial build-ings and industrial plants all over the

In addition to 711 Third Avenue, the Kaufman Organization built 777 Third Avenue, 405 Park Avenue, 427 Madison Avenue, 747 Third Avenue, 77 Water Street and 127 John Street.

GEORGES CABANIER, FRENCH ADMIRAL DIES

Senior Naval Officer Fought Beside U.S. in Pacific in World War II After Joining the Free French

Special to The New York Times PARIS, Oct. 26-Adm. Georges Cabanier. France's most senior naval officer, who fought with the United States Third Fleet in the Pacific during World War II, died today at his home here of an apparent stroke. He was 69 years old.

The admiral, who was born Nov. 21, 1906, at the southwestern village of Gre-nade, was a graduate of the French naval DR CHARLES RAGANUR 1906, at the southwestern village of Greacademy and an early specialist in submarine warfare. At the outset of World War II he commanded the mine-laying submarine Rubis, which, as part of a Brit ish submarine flotilla, participated in the ill-fated Allied campaign to oust the Germans from Norway. In June 1940 Admiral Cabanier became the first naval officer to join de Gaulle's Free French in London. Until early 1943 he participated in attacks on German craft in the Atlantic, still as commander of the Rubis, all of whose crew had fol-lowed him to Britain. He was then put in charge of the defense of French possessions in the Pacific.

French Delegate to U.N.

After Pearl Harbor his cruiser Cap des Palmes was integrated into the Third Fleet, and he participated in its actions until he was sent as a French delegate to the San Francisco conference that founded the United Nations.

Until 1949 the admiral headed the nava academy. In that year he was named naval attaché in Washington, a position he held until 1953. In 1954 he was France's last naval commander for the southern sector of Indochina.

In 1958, as de Gaulle was returning to power, Admiral Cabanier was named Chief of the Defense Staff. From 1960 until his retirement in 1968 he was Chief of Staff of the navy.

The admiral, whose hobbies were hunting, fishing and golf, leaves his wife, the former Jacqueline Leroy, and a daughter.

Hotel was announced by Walter Fries, president of one of the Central Banks of Florida, of which Mrs. Garrison was a majority stockholder.
The Dade County Medical Examiner's office said that it had not determined the cause of death. No foul play pected. Mr. Fries said that Mrs. Garrison, a resident of Houston, Tex., was in the Miami area to attend a meeting of the banks' board of directors. Ten years ago, on March 6, 1966, Mrs. Garrison, then Mrs. Mossler, and Melvin Lane Powers, her nephew, were acquitted of the clubbing-stabbing death of her second husband, Jacques Mossler, on June 30, 1964. The prosecution charged that Mrs. Garrison and Mr. Powers, who was half her age, were lovers, and argued that they killed Mr. Mossler sothey could live on her inheritance. The case was based almost entirely on circumstantial evidence and a jury acquitted them. One of the defense lawyers was Percy Foreman, and though he technically represented only Mr. Powers, Mrs. Mossler was committed to pay: him. The noted trial lawyer's $250,000 fee became the subject of sev-

Two Elderly Men Found Dead; Police Blame Illness and Poverty

By EMANUEL PERLMUTTER

The four-room apartment at 651 West 188th Street, in Washington Heights, was littered with wine bottles and rubbish. Two elderly men lay on the living room floor, dead, it appeared, for more than a week. An elderly woman was semiconscious on the floor of her bedroom. There was no evidence of vio-

"They drank a lot, but were quiet and never bothered anybody," said Detective Thomas W. McKenna, one of the police officers who found the bodies Monday night when summoned by a neighbor who had not seen the three elderly people for more than two weeks. The officers had to enter through the fire escape of the sixth-floor apartment. There they found Robert Rowe, 65 years old: Lawrence Gaghan, 72, and Mr. Rowe's sister, Olga Donahue, a 76-year-old widow. She was taken to Jewish Memorial Hospital for treatment of

As the story was pieced together by the police, the deaths were the culmination of age, poverty and illness. They learned that Mr. Rowe had worked for Mr. Gaghan when the latter had a small luncheonette in the once middleclass neighborhood. Mr. Gaghan became ill and lost his business, and Mr. Rowe moved in with him in the West 188th Street apartment to take care of him. Both men began to get Supplemental Security Income.

When Mr. Rowe became ill and was no longer able to care for his friend, his sister moved in to care for both of them last summer. But she, too, became ill. A caseworker for the Social Services Department's Bureau of Protective Services came to the apartment fast Friday seking to talk to Mrs. Donahue, but she refused to admit him.

New York Employees Curbed on Check Cashing

The Beame administration announced a plan to save $1 million by limiting the check-cashing privileges of 225.000 city employees. Up to now, according to Ivan E. Irizarry, the city Finance Administrator, municipal workers could cash their paychecks at any bank in the city, even if the bank was not the worker's own. About four million such checks were cashed last year alone-at a cost to the city of 25 cents a check. Mr. Irizarry said that the city had won a concession from the civil service unions accepting the new regulation, saving the city the million dollars a year. He said that the employees would soon receive a circular with the information and effective date of the change and that they would have to go to banks where they have accounts to cash their salary checks.

Two more jurors, a man and a woman, were selected in Jersey City in the murder retrial of Rubin (Hurricane) Carter and James Artis. That brings to three the number selected so far, two men and one woman. A total of seven jurors were questioned during the proceedings. Four were excused for cause and one was excused by the court. Sixteen jurors are needed before the selection process is completed. Jury selection, which is scheduled to continue, is expected to last until Nov. 5, with testimony scheduled to start Nov. 8.

Mr. Carter, a former middleweight boxer, and Mr. Artis were sentenced to life in prison in 1967 on triple-murder convictions stemming from an incident in a Paterson bar. In March, the New Jersey Supreme Court ordered a new trial Both are free on bail pending the outcome of the new trial.

Tax Abatements Voted

A tax-abatement bill designed to spur jobs and construction was passed yesterday by the City Council on a vote of 30 to 6. The legislation gives realestate-tax exemptions to newly constructed or renovated commercial and industrial buildings. Its wording is the same as that of enabling legislation that was passed by the Legislature at its last session. Opponents described the bill as "badly flawed" and said it "would never work." Mayor Beame, who requested the measure be introduced to the City Council, is expected to sign the local measure into law shortly. For newly constructed buildings, there would be a 50 percent real estate tax exemption over a 10-year period, which would decrease at the rate of five percentage points a year. There would also be a 95 percent tax abatement for reconstructed property, which would decrease five percentage points a year over 19 years.

U.S. Orders Jam Seized

The Federal Government has ordered the seizure of 500 cases of strawberry jam containing red dye No. 2, a coloring agent whose use was prohibited last February by the Food and Drug Administration. An assistant United States attorney, Elaine C. Buck, said the jam, in indivdual half-ounce packets, had been shipped by the manufacturer, Unit Portions Inc. of Lindenburst, N. Y., to a military installation in Williamsburg, Va., but had been returned as the result of an F.D.A. inspection, which found the prohibited dye. Red No. 2, which is believed by researchers to cause cancer, was banned when the F.D.A. said no satisfactory evidence of its safety had

113,500 to Benefit as the Authority Bows to Pressure — Details May Take Up to a Month to Work Out

By STEVEN R. WEISMAN

Bowing to pressure from Mayor Beame and a group of legislators, the Metropolitan Transportation Authority yesterday granted half-fare privileges for 113,500 pupils who since last month had been paying the full 50-cent fare for trips on subways and buses to and from school.

The decision was a compromise accepted by the authority at a board meeting Monday night, and it was welcomed yesterday by both Mr. Beame and Assemblyman Leonard P. Stavisky, the Queens Democrat who had led the lobbying effort for weeks ont the half-fare passes may take as much as a month to set up, according to Bernard R. Gifford, the deputy school chancellor.

chancellor.

"This program presents us with a tremendous amount of cost and overhead," Dr. Gifford said. "We're going to have to collect the money from the kids, decide what kind of passes we should use and choose the steps needed to safeguard it from abuse."

The decision by the authority was a move to provide some relief to pupils who have traditionally been able to ride subways and buses free, but who lost this privilege because of budget cutbacks by the Board of Education.

The board had aliminated a $16.5 mil-

The board had eliminated a $16.5 million subsidy that it had traditionally given to the transit system, and used the money instead for special programs for the handicapped. That decision ended free transportation for 113,500 pupils and imposed higher fares for 63,400 others.

More Trushcy Was Feared

Mr. Stavisky and other state and city egislators argued that elimination of free ransportation would cause greater truany, which in turn would cost the school stem state-aid payments, which are gged to attendance levels.

The Assemblyman and the Mayor's budget staff calculated that letting the 113,500 pupils ride for half-fare would actually make money for the Transit Au-

Donald D. Kummerfeld, the city's Budget Director, said last week that without the fare break only 20 percent of the 113,500 pupils would ride on the transit system, bringing the Transit Authority $3.5 million, but that if they were permit-ted half-fare privileges, 50 percent of them would ride, bringing the Transit Authority $4.2 million. Mr. Beame brought Mr. Stavisky and. transit officials together in a meeting last Friday to press the half-fare proposal and yesterday the Mayor took credit for its

But Mr. Stavisky said he would continue to push Mr. Beame and the Board of Education to come up with a limited additional subsidy to permit the 113,500 pupils to pay even less than half the fare.
"Many parents and lawmakers believe this is only a first step." he said, "and that the city and Board of Education should each make a small contribution to reduce the cost of each ride still fur-ther. Such talks should continue."

But school and city aides ruled out the possibility of further subsidies because of financial constraints. The elimination of free transportation expenditure of $20 or $40 a year for some children, depending on their grade and the distance they travel to school. The city continues to provide free transporta-tion for 124,000 children and reduced fares for 320,000 more. Initially, the Transit Authority had been described as less resistant to allowing the half-fare than it was to the burden of administering a half-fare program.

Suit on Sludge Sought in Jersey

TOMS RIVER, N. J., Oct. 26 (AP)-Ocean County, said he would ask the State Public Advocate's office to sue New York and New Jersey communities that dump sludge off the New Jersey coast. Mr. Russo said yesterday that he and Robert A. Gasser, a County Freeholder, would meet with Stanley Van Ness, the Public Advocate, here tomorrow to discuss a course of action. Mr. Russo said that there was a "growing concern that" sludge dumping was one of the major contributory factors in the algae growth, which caused several fishkills along Ocean County beaches this summer."

Inmates, for $30, Received Whisky In Cans of 'Juice'

STORMVILLE, N. Y., Oct. 26 (AP)—Some inmates at the Green Haven State Correctional Facility have been receiving whisky mailed into the maximum-security facility in fruit juice cans, the state police said today.

The inmates paid $30 a can for the whisky, which they received in the mail "disguised" as fruit juice sent from relatives, officials

Edward K. Bellezzi, 20 years old, of Mount Kisco, N. Y., was arrest-ed and charged with promoting prison contraband, a first-degree felony, according to the police.

They said that the smuggling operation, which reportedly in-volved about 16 inmates, had been going on for a few months but was recently stopped. No inmates have been arrested.

But since the contraband whisky operation was halted, Walter Fogg, the Green Haven superintendent, said guards have been having trouble controlling the manufacture of brew made by the inmates.

Mr. Fogg said that about 10 days ago the prison riot squad, armed with tear gas and guns, had been called out to put a group of drunk-en inmates back into their cells. He said that no force had to be used, however. He said the inmates had been making the liquor in wash buckets, using fruit peels or "anything that will cook."

"I haven't heard much lately, but little pieces drift back. The National Enquirer wanted to do an article, but Lloyd wouldn't give them any comment. He says, 'A factory?' and I says, 'Send me a map of the land and maybe I can figure what they want.' I got into the maps .- I've still got 'em here—and I found natural gas in one location and oil in another. I don't think anybody's ever found oil in Iowa.

"Knowing the German people, I know they have guys that have the same kind of knowledge I have. They used psychics during the war to locate enemy tanks and heavy artillery. Hitler had a fellow like me on his payroll. Well, sure enough, three strangers did contact Lloyd and he told em he would sell them land rights but not mineral rights.

They wouldn't buy, and that's the last I've heard. "It's too bad about Warm Breeze. I advised salt water baths and massage, not just let him swim in the ocean but put him in for a while, take him out and massage him and then put him in again. I do know salt water therapy would do more for him than a month of training, but they haven't done it yet. And he needs his hobbles adjusted for a halfmile track. Before we relieved his pain he probably didn't notice, but his hobbles could be burning him now or something. But they have to call me, I can't guess."

Knicks Top Braves, 118-104; Barons Fall, 5-2, to Rangers

Haywood and Monroe Excel—3-0 Start Best Since '69

By SAM GOLDAPER

The Knicks are beginning to convert the nonbelievers.

In another exhibition of their new playing styl, the Knicks defeated the Buffalo Braves, 118-104, last night before a crowd of 12,228 at Madison Square Garden, It was the Knicks' third straight National Basketball Association triumph. Without a los, the first time they have opened with that many victories since the 1969-70 champion-ship season. Buffalo, still playing without Bob McAdoo, the league's leading score for the last three seasons, suf-fered its first loss in three games. McAdoo is sidelined with a lower back injury.

The optimism that is beginning to flow stems not so much from the fact that the Knicks unexpectedly have won all their game, but rather from the way they have won them. The Knicks are pushing the ball up quickly, running and looking to help each other offensively and defensively. The running game has prevented opponents from satting up their defense. setting up their defenses.

Haywood Shift a Factor

"Running is 60 percent of our newfound success," said Spencer Haywood, who is slowly making the unselfish conversion to center. "There is no more standing around looking at each other. We're moving. Last season I would stand around and watch Cylde [Walt Frazier] dribble and he would look at me and hold the ball. I'm even beginning to learn how to pass the ball. There is no unselfishness on this club anymore. We're looking for each other and moving the ball."

Haywood scored 23 points and grabbed 15 rebounds. The conversion from forward to center has moved him closer to the basket and facing it. It has made him more effective.

The Knicks shot 57 percent for the second straight game. They have bettered the 50 percent shooting mark in all three games. And, while the Knicks were on target, the Braves were far off, taking a club-record 120 shots, 30 more than the Knicks. But Buffalo made only 43 shots, and New York made 51, with Earl Monroe showing the way with 29 points.

The Braves' strength was in thei offensive rebounding. The overall power of Adrian Dantley, John Shumate and Don Adams allowed the Braves to grab 30 offensive rebounds, compared with four by the Kicks. At times, Buffalo got four and five shots at the basket. One of the Braves' problems, though, was that they took poor shots.

Taking Early Command The Knicks raced to a 13-4 advantage in the opening three minutes and increased their lead to 33-24 at the end of the first quarter on the strength of Monroe's 11 points. After 8 straight points, the Knicks' lead reached 16 four minutes into the second quarter. "It's a great feeling to be able to watch the other teams play catch-up ball," said Monroe, one of three Knicks who bettered the 20-point mark. "Last who bettered the zu-point mark. Last season we were the guys playing catch-up. Now we're going right out and piling up big early leads and making the other guys play catch-up."

$10 Million Set For Developing Games Athletes

By NEIL AMDUR

The United States Olympic Committee will spend more than $10 million in sports development for the 1980 Moscow Olympics, a commitment unparalleled in American amateur ath-

Col. Don Miller, the U. S. O. C. executive director, declined to disclose specific details of the committee's plans, which represent a 250 percent increase over previous developmental programs.

we are preparing a $20 million budget for Moscow," Miller said, during a recent interview. "It may wind up $25 million with inflation. At least $10 million will be spent on development, and that's not counting any Federal funds. This commitment will provide the said test for the immediate. us with an acid test for the immediate

The U.S.O.C. shift in emphasis toward development, over previous priorities such as team preparation, appears to reflect a growing concern over the improved performance level and long-range commitments of the Soviet Union, East Germany and other Eastern European countries.

The program still in the organizational stage, is being headed by Howard C. Miller, president of Canteen Corporation, a Chicago-based company. The U.S.O.C. is hoping to enlist 150 corporations in the program.

Although suffering a gold shortage on tithe playing fields in Montreal, America's Olympic movement may wind up with a balanced budget, or even a gold surplus, for the first time in recent Olympics. A study of Aug. 31 balance sheets from the U.S.O.C. indicates a deficit of $353,385.32 for the 44-month quadrennial period between Jan. 1, 1973 and Aug. 31, 1976. However, U. S. O. Murdoch, Hickey: 2 Each

CLEVELAND, Oct. 26-The Rangers' power play, the most effective in the eagu, accounted for three goals tonight as New York returned to .500 hockey with a 5-2 victory over a sluggish Cleveland Baron team. Don Murdoch, the 20-year-old right wing with an intuition for when and where to shoot, scored two goals tonight, raising his total to 11 goals in 10 games. Pat Hickey also scored two goals—both on the power play.

Although Phil Esposito was not among hie scorers, he did record two assists to become the seventh player in National Hockey League history to reach 700 assists.

Since changing their uniform, name and locale, the former California Seals had made a fine start htis season but tonight they were below their usual enthusiastic form. The Ranger youngsters, meanwhile, under less pressure then in recent games made fewer mistakes. Tomorrow night the Rangers meet the Bosotn Bruins in Madison Square Garden and the pressure will

Barons Get First Goal

Before tonight's game Murdoch met with his older brother, Bob, who plays for Cleveland, and was kidded about the publicity he had been receiving for his scoring feats. "I scored five goals in one game," said the Ranger rookie, smiling, "and now the fans expect me to score five all the time. I would have rather had three two-goal games than one five-goal game. He got no sympathy from his lesser-known big brother, whose Cleveland teammates had tacked a sign over his locker reading "Don

Murdoch's brother."

The Rangers played more cautiously and positionally than has been their habit waiting for high percentage chances to open up during even-handed situations and utilizing power-play opportunities to pour in the goals.

The Barons dominated the opening 10 minutes when Charlie Simmer scored for Cleveland, eluding Mike McEwen near the Ranger net and stuffing the puck under John Davidson, Davidson was making his first appearance in the Ranger net after a four-game stint by Gilles Gratton.

But with a Ranger power-play goal by Hickey midway through the period. the Barons' orderly play gave way and their legs grew leaden. Their last game had been on Thursday and the layoff apparently harmed them.

Murdoch Scores Twice

Rod Gilbert scored the second New York goal in the opening period, pick-ing up the puck at the Baron blue line and sprinting past the only opponent back, Fred Ahern, a forward. The Rangers followed their excellent start with three goals in the second period, including two by Don Murdoch, one on goal by Hickey.

Gilles Meloche was the Baron goalie victimized by the Ranger attack. In the second period New York had 14 shots at him. Murdoch scored his second-period goal, on two typically stinging shots, one an instant rifling of a crossice pass from Gilbert with the Barons two men short. Then Murdoch came cruising down the right side and sent a 40-foot shot into Meleche's left shoul-challenging the Olympic ban on anabolic steroids, contending the "muscle pills" are harmless to physically ma-tire athletes if dosages are carefully cöntrolled.

German Doctors Challenge Olympic Ban on Steroids BONN, West Germany, Oct. 26 (AP)— A group of West German sports doctors

The specialists, who give medical advice to the West German Olympic Comnattee, say athletes in the East and West are forced to use muscle-building drugs to meet norms in 18 Olympic sports, including weight lifting, wrestling, discus throw and shot-put. They say steroids were secretly sanctioned years ago by the Soviet-bloc nations.

Dr. Wildor Hollman, one of those challenging the ban, said he would "support every measure that helps to improve the athlete's performance, without injuring his health."

we'd have had a long march and scored," he said.

"Guilty? The guys I talked to didn't have any guilt problems," said John Mendenhall, the defensive tackle who had his differences with Arnsparger, "Hey, Boone, you feel guilty?"

Bill (Boone) Bryant, the cornerback, was sitting on a stool in front of his locker. "No, I just go out and play my came," he said. Mendenhall also heard the news by telephone. A friend called me about 4 o'clock," he said. Did his friend sound happy?

"Oh yeah, he's a Giant fan. But I can't say I'm happy." McVay is an unknown factor to Mendenhali. Just an assistant coach "I used to see around." But the tackle had already got a good report on McVay from some of the Giants who played for the coach in the last two years at Memphis of the World Football League.

Gary Shirk, the reserve tight end who played for McVay at Memphis, said, "I would put him in a class with Jack Pardee," the coach credited with holding the Florida Blazers together during the difficult last days of the W.F.I. and now the acclaimed coach of the Chicago Bears.

"When times were hard in the W.F.L., he kept the team together," said Shirk. "I mean, 17-3, 8-4 (McVay's two-season record at Memphis) that's doing a heck of a job when people didn't know if they're going to play from one week to the next. And we were 3-2 the first year and ended up 17-3. I can't remember anything specific he did, but he turned it around."

Some players thought the coaching change might turn the Giants around.
"You had to expect it," said Jack Gregory, the defensive captain and

But even Gregory didn't expect the change so soon. "I thought if he lost next week, he'd be gone," he said. "We had no morale problem, but it was like Andy Robustelli said: If we kept losing, it would start breaking up." Now, instead of breaking up, some Giants feel they have been given a second National Football League season We're 0-7 but this is like starting all over again," said Al Simpson, the left guard. "We tried a quarterback change and that didn't work. Maybe this might straighten us out a little bit. A kind of realism hit the place this morning."

Dick Vermeil, coach of the Eagles who beat the Giants, 20-7, in the second game of the season, was realistic on the phone today. "Really the best way to change a team from losing is to get a lot better football players, not change the coach," he said.

Powers 'Questionable' for Sunday

Clyde Powers, the strong safety, has a bruised shoulder and is "question-able" for Sunday, weakening a Giant secondary already without its starting cornerbacks, Robby Brooks and Henry Stuckey, for the rest of the season.
... The only serious Eagle injury is to Mike Hogan, a rookie halfback, Vermeil reported.

The Jets players had the day off, and many needed it. Joe Namath was listed as "questionable" with a swollen right knee. If he can't make it Sunday, Richard Todd will quarterback the team against the Bills in Buffalo. . . .

With Ed Marinaro and Steve Davis still out, Bob Gresham and Clark Gaines will be the starting running backs. . . . Shafer Suggs, the left cornerback has an ankle injury and Rich Sowells might have to start.

Baseball Girds for Expansion and Free-Agent Pic

By MURRAY CHASS

The World Series between the Yankees and the Cincinnati Reds represented the last games among baseball players until next March, but baseball officials are deeply involved in games of their own.

The expansion game began Monday when the 12 American League teams submitted their protected lists of 15 players each. The new clubs in Toronto and Seattle will scrutinize the list of unprotected players and devise their strategy for the expansion draft No. 5, in which each established club will lose five players.

25 in Free-Agent Pool

Baseball's other draft-the selection negotiation rights to free agentswill be held a week from tomorrow, and that figures to stir more discussion and controversy than this year's World Series. The 24 established clubs will be able to sign two free agents, or as many as they lose to free agencies. The expansion teams are not eligible.

The free-agent pool was reduced to 25 players over the weekend when Steve Brye, the Minnesota outfielder,

The remaining free agents have until next Monday to sign with their old clubs. If they don't they will be eligible to be designated by a maximum of 12 teams in the draft and then must negotiate with only those teams, plus their old team if they desire.

The teams will select according to the inverse order of their won-lost records for the 1976 season, with the team that lost most choosing first.

The National League won a coin toss

Yanks May Lose Alexander

"We haven't closed the door, but chances are slim that he will sign,' Jerry Kapstein, Alexander's agent, said from his office in Providence, R. I. "It has nothing to do with our or their lack of effort. We've talked almost on a daily basis. We just have an honest difference of opinion on something."

Neither Kapstein nor Gabe Paul, the Yankee president, would say what that difference was, but it appears to be Alexander's insistence on having a guaranteed number of starts during a season. The Yankees have been known to satisfy players financially, but agreeing to a minimum number of starts for a pitcher is another matter.

Alexander and Gullett

Alexander and Don Guilett, the Cincinnati pitcher, were the last two players officially to become free agents. Their contracts with their teams expired at the end of the World Series.

There was some speculation that the ankle injury Guilett suffered in the first game of the Series would affect his attractiveness to other teams.

But Kapstein, who also is Gullett's agent, said: "I was extremely gratified by the tremendous interest shown in Don. Only one club expressed some concern, but that club also said they would just have to see the doctor's report. All the other clubs told me they knew the fact that he was on crutches had nothing to do with his pitching."

10 Free Agents Kapstein's

Kapstein represents 10 of the 25 free agents. His other clients are Dave Cash of Philadephia, Bobby Grich and Wayne Garland of Baltimore, and five Oakland A's-Bert Campaneris, Gene Tenace, Joe Rudi, Rollie Fingers and Don Bay-

"I doubt that any of my people will sign between now and Nov. I," Kapstein said.

It is believed that at least some teams will meet their free agents' demands before next Monday, just so they won't lose the players. Kapstein, however, said he had no indication of that happening. Certainly not with Charles O. Finley, the agent added.

"I'm here if Charlie wants to contact me," Kapstein said of the A's owner, "but I don't plan to call him. Some of the players don't chose to play for him so there's no reason to talk to

Although millions of dollars will be spent on signing the free agents, many club officials agonize at least as much over the expansion draft and which players to protect from the two new

The Yankees, for example, have more than 15 players on their 25-man roster they would like to have protected. And that doesn't even take into account good minor league prospects, such as Mickey Klutts, a shortstop, Ken Clay, a pitcher, and Terry Whitfield, an out-

President C. Magrath said the university was not opposing the probation placed on the basketball program last spring, but said the court action was necessary because the N.C.A.A. had declared thre players guilty and punished Minnesota for not enforcing the action.

A difficulty in trying to pinpoint the causes of the drop in Scholastic Aptitude Test scores is that, in spite of the decline, there are still some signs that achievement has not deteriorated, particularly in reading, and that many young people are doing work far more difficult work than that demanded of their parents at the same age, especially in mathematics.

Also, research projects conducted to determine the reading and mathematical abilities of adults have found widespread deficiencies that raise a serious challenge to the presumption that stu-dents of past generations were better prepared than those of today.

It may well be that, when and if College Board investigators produce some explanations for the decline, they may lean heavily toward factors that are beyond the control of the

After all, it is hard to ignore the changes in mores and attitudes that were produced by the social upheaval

Respect Held a Factor

Dwindling respect for authority, eagerness for instant gratification, hours of daily television-viewing, disintegration of family life and the use drugs seem more likely than not to have had their impact on what takes place in the classroom.

Not that the schools themselves have not changed. For better or worse, there have been the effects of fewer students taking foreign languages, a more flex-ible curriculum, teacher militancy, a lower dropout rate and a higher col-lege-going rate and a court-enforced loosening of discipline.

In such a climate, with research on the links between causes and effects still scanty, one of the dangers is that the schools may be shoved toward simplistic steps that are supposed to shore up educational quality.

Mr. Howe, who is a vice president of the Ford Foundation, had this in mind yesterday when he warned that hasty measures for reversing the decline run more of a risk of disservice to American youth and American society than of doing anything useful."

"What worries me," he said, "is that we may overreact and introduce in schools a regimentation of learning that both denies what we know about the individual differences among children and the importance of motivation in producing learning and also denies the significant values of schooling un-measured by tests."

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 26 (AP)-Gov. filton J. Shapp ruptured a blood vessel in his throat during a speech in New York City over the weekend and will be unable to make any more speeches for Democratic candidates, an aide said today. "It's apparently not serious," said district personnel director. Mike McLaughlin, the Governor's press secretary.

munity School Board 5 "has repeatedly and consistently demonstrated its unwillingness or inability to comply with its duties under law and applicable directives," School Chancellor Irving Anker yesterday suspended all eight members of the board and said he would name trustees to run the district's 23 schools.

The action by the Chancellor-the third time a community board has been suspended since the decentralization of public schools in 1970—came after months of controversy involving charges of fiscal mismanagement and other irregularities.

In his letter of suspension, delivered to the board's offices at 433 West 123d Street, Mr. Anker said the district had had "a history of budgetary overexpenditures, fiscal mismanagement and serious difficulties in its administrative capabili-

Six of the eight board members promptly protested the suspension and indicated they would appeal the decision. In a telephone interview last night, one of the suspended board members. Delia Ortiz, disputed a number of Mr. Anker's accusations and charged that he was basing his decision on problems that have been cleared up.

"All the charges are in the past tense," she said. Mrs. Ortiz said that last year's $400,000 deficit had occurred because of "lack of proper clarification" by central board officials and that it had been repaid out of this year's budget. She also accused the chancellor of blaming the board for problems beyond its area of responsibility

"We're policy makers, not administra-tors," she said in response to Mr. Anker's charge that the board had failed to provide an accurate seniority list in laying age groups in school. He says that when off teachers, leading to the intervention, an adult works 8 or 10 hours, a good of the division of personnel three weeks, part of his time is taken up by routine.

Attached to Their Habits

According to Rector Henri Gauthier of them come down with psychosomatic the senior official in the Education Ministry, the trouble is that the French areattached to their habits. It is virtually night. Instead, he said, the ministry, which runs the school system nationally, has bene "nibbling away" at the summer vacation, gaining/a day one year, another day the next.

Another flaw in the school system here it is widely believed, is the length of les sons. They last 55 minutes each, though physicians say that the attention span of a 6-year-old is 25 minutes, of a 10-year-old 40 minutes and of an adolescent 50 minutes. Rector Gauthier disclosed plans for reducing lessons to 50 minutes, perhaps even to 45.

"The young need a time to work and time to dream," says the ministry's own study of the problem. One way of fighting fatigue in the schools, Mr. Gauthier said is to have difficult subjects, such as arithmetic, alternate with easier ones, such as drawing.

Another way is to enliven the teaching by wider use of audio-visual methods, age group between 11 and 19 and was field trips and show-and-tell sessions, he based on 2,000 answers received from said, because its also monotony that those studied.

engenders fatigue. Counteracting the Daily Slump

Still another way is to distribute the day's work in such a way as to take account of the children's daily cycle of energy and slump. "For instance," Mr. Gauthier said, "we have found that the children work less well after sports because that exhausts them, so sports classes should not come in the morning." The energy cycle, of course, is linked to sleeping habits and nutrition.

The traditional French breakfast, especially in Paris, is coffee, sometimes with milk and a roll or a piece of bread with butter. Dr. André Soubiran, a writer on medical subjects, has long campaigned -largely in vain-for a richer breakfast

According to the parents' federation,
75 percent of children follow their parents' bad example, except that many take cocoa. Four percent of the children have no breakfast at all.

As to sleeping habits, the federation found that 30 percent of children aged 7 and 8 did not sleep the minimum 10 hours, the proportion rising to 70 percent among those 13 and 14 years old.

All experts partly blame television for keeping children awake too late, but they also blams parents' ignorance of the number of hours their children must sleep to be alert and healthy.

Surviving of State Henry A. Kissinger, not generally known for according excess praise, characterized the late Dean G. Acheson yesterday as "the greatest Secretary of State of the 20th century." Mr. Acheson, a Democrat, held the office from 1949 to '53 in the Administration of President Truman. He died in 1971, Mr. Kissinger spoke at the dedication of the State Department's West Auditorium as the Dean Acheson Auditorium.

"[Mr. Acheson] and the President he so loyally served set the course we have all followed since," Mr. Kissinger said. "In so doing, [they] ushered in the most creative period in the history of American foreign policy." Mr. Acheson, he said, was largely responsible for "the shape and design of American foreign policy for the better part of the eign policy for the better part of the past three decades." Recalling Mr. Acheson as "warm and witty," Secretary Kissinger said, "Dean was one of the most eloquent men of his time. He was a man of total and uncompromising integrity and monumental courage."

Sentences for their part in a 1975 plot to smuggle over a ton of hashish from Morocco to Mystic, Conn., have been imposed on Herman Fine, a former lecturer in psychology at Hunter College, and Lady Rose Delbray, de-scribed in British court proceedings as his mistress. Mr. Fine was sentenced to three years in Federal prison and a $20,000 fine by Judge Jack B. Wein-stein, Brooklyn Federal Court, who said Mr. Fine's "organizational ability" as a "good business man" involved less culpable persons in the plan to use Lady Rose's 54-foot yacht to transport the hashish, which allegedly had a street value of nearly $2 million.

In London, Lady Pose, 25-year-old daughter of the Earl of Hardwicke, was fined $170 and given a two-year suspended juil sentence. The defense said the convent-aducated Lady Rose had met Mr. Fine when she was 17he reportedly had a computer school in London then—and was so under his domination that she could not end the relationship.

"The Contest" Is Nostalgic, Skillful Play

By MEL GUSSOW

Shirley Mezvinsky Lauro's first play, "The Contest," an old-fashioned, naturalistic slice-of-life that takes place in a small town in the Middle West in 1943, rises far above its genre. Mrs. Lauro, a novelist, has a natural talent for the theater, and the production, as directed by Paul Austin at the Ensemble Studio Theater, is impeccable.

The play lightly wears a coat of nostalgia—the Green family hears "Lorenzo Jones" on the radio and period music is played between scenes-but it has the sincerity of a deeply per-sonal memoir. On one level, the author asks what it was like to grow up poor and Jewish in a Protestant community. But the core of the play is not socio-logical or ethnic. It deals with a young girl, eager for life but shy about assert-ing herself, who admires her struggling father, and is both charmed and horrified by her impossible mother.

The mother, Lily, is "a card." As we meet her, she is a little like Gypsy Rose Lee's mother, or a Jewish Auntie Mame, tossing off vaudeville gags, breaking into favorite routines. Her lifeblood is entering contests. Buying carloads of Bab-O, Ipana, and Peter Paul Mounds bars — and seriously depleting the family's meager earnings — she cuts out coupons and then coaxes her musi-cally inclined daughter to help her write jingles.

Gradually we see that the mother is not only colorful, she is also a monster—totally solipsistic, prejudiced, nad uncaring about her family. Her incapacity in the kitchen—dinner is what-ever cold can she takes down from the cupboard — is indicative of a deeper

The play has a novelistic sweep, in three acts spanning a year and cover-ing several levels within a family from the Greens, the poor relations, to the cattle-rich Grossmans, led by Lilly's snobbish sister, who never lets her forget her second place.

A great deal of "The Contest" is funny, but it is not a comedy. Mrs. Lauro clearly is more interested in the dramatic confrontation of character, the formation-under stress-of the personality of the daughter. In the dialogue and in the face of the actress, Loren Brown, we can see the tentative-ness and the increasing helplessness as she is attracted, embarrassed and finally humiliated by her mother.

The play is beautifully cast and executed. Miss Brown is tender and ap-pealing as the daughter. Mordecai Lawner, as the father, an immigrant with a Talmudic lilt to his speech, lets us see the pathos beneath a slightly crusty exterior (his daughter and her piano playing are his treasures). Estelle Omens as the mother is something quite special. It would have been easy to play Lily for laughs or for tears: She could be a musical comedy. But Miss Omens keeps her lifesize, and illusions. Even at her most selfish, she still has a childlike ingenuousness Miss Omens gives a virtuoso perform-

Mrs. Lauro is dealing with familiar material in a traditional manner, but the characters are freshly observed, the situation richly specific, and the play has a dramatic impact. Mrs. Lauro is a playwright to be encouraged and Curt Demoster's Ensemble Studio Theater is to be complimented for perceptivity and for skillfulness in presentation.

International Society for Contemporary Music Holds Strenuously Forth at New England Conservatory

> By HAROLD C. SCHONBERG . Special to The New York Times

BOSTON, Oct. 26-Since Sunday, the World Music Days of the International Society for Contemporary Music has been holding strenuously forth at Jor-dan Hall of the New England Conservatory of Music. Strenuous is the correct word. The sessions call for two concerts a day, each some two hours long, filled with complex avant-garde music that taxes the minds of the listeners as strenuously as it taxes the capabilities of the performers.

Composers from 28 countries are represented, and most of them seem to be writing much in the same style and orchestrating much the same way. In the great days of the I.S.C.M., a program might contain new works by Stra-vinsky, Bartok and Webern-major composers, each representing a radically different style. But at these concerts there is generally an appalling con-formity. Nearly all of the music is Serial or Serial-derived, inspired by Darmstadt or Princeton.

Audiences have been small, around 250 for any given concert. That is not unusual, and probably there would be no larger an audience anywhere in the world. The music of the international avant-garde has never had a beach-head that extended much beyond a small group of professionals. Every-body here has been listening politely, but there has been very little enthusi-asm. Only a few works among the 26 heard since Sunday afternoon have pierced the general gloom.

Few Departures From Serialism It is interesting to note that those few works departed somewhat from the doctrinaire Serialism that the majority of the composers have adopted. Daniel Bortz of Sweden, in a short work named "Nightflies," worked up a lively atonal piece for a singer and a small instru-mental group, and this was a score with some personality. Much interest also was paid to Oliver Knussen's Symphony No. 2, a work that uses a soprano soloist throughout. Mr. Knussen, from England, is the baby of the festival. He was born in 1952 and, as composers go, is a pro-tege. He composed this Second Symphony in 1971, when he was only 21 years old, and it is full of striking ideas that alternate with a rather glib, motoristic quality. The score calls for high soprano, and Mr. Knussen means high. Christine Noel Whittlesey, who sang the solo part, was called upon to han dle a tessitura far above the staff, with D's and E's above high C. Mr. Knussen also has written in optional A's above high C for some enterprising soprano of a future generation when, presumably, singers are made differently. Elsewhere the score is dissonant, expres-sionistic and even has a few moments of real poetry.

But vocal settings in this range, and with syllables broken up in the modern manner, simply cannot be understood, and one wonders why the com-posers do not settle for vocalises. Many scores the last few days have called for singers. There was the Bortz "Nightflies"; the Music for Winds, Percussion, Cello and Voices by Rolv Yttrehus of the United States; the "Meridian" of Harrison Birtwistle of England, and the "Else" of Josef Tal of

Of these, only the Tal was composed in such a way that the words could be understood. Mr. Tal, a veteran composer, has in "Else55 composed a sensitive homage to Else Lasker-Schüler, a German poet who died in Israel. The score is mildly dodecaphonic, has tonal sections, and breathes a gentle poetry. It had no success at all.

Nationalism is not part of the international style. Even music by Oriental composers had all the clichés of con-struction and instrumentation. The "Strömung" of Yoshiro Irino of Japan, for instance, used the official avantgarde instrument-the vibraphone-together with elaborate percussion, and was one of the post-Serial works that is skilfully put together without evidence of any personality behind it. Music from Korea, Venezuela, Spain, Canada, Yugoslavia, Sweden, the Netherlands, Hungary and the United States came and went as though everything was a segment of one superplace, to be lifted out like a piece of tile on a kitchen floor. Among pieces that drifted a bit from the Serial conformity was J. M. Horvath's "Origines," the product of an Austrian (though Hungarian-born) composer who displayed some real muscle in his writing, and who made striking in his writing, and who made striking use of silences. There also was the Birtwistle "Meridian," a moody athematic setting of poems by Christopher Logne and Thomas Wyatt. Mr. Birtwistle supplemented his singer by a chorus of six sopranos who also were called upon to employ some percussion sounds. Hardly a word of the vocal settings could be understood, but the highly regarded English composer at least writes music that has real characleast writes music that has real character, and he was one of the few. STONE CRABS THE CLUB are swimmin again and WICKEDLY Joe is flying 'em in again WITTY

The STONE CRAB is found along the coasts of the South Atlantic and Gulf States, but because of its habits, it is seldom seen by the casual visitor to the seashore.

The flesh of the STONE CRAB is considered a GREAT DELICACY and is said to resemble lobster in flavor. The yield of meat from the body is slight, and only the claws of STONE CRABS are marketed. The crabs are captured mainly with pots, and it is the usual practice of the fishermen to release the crabs after breaking off their claws. Nothing definite is known concerning the survival of crabs whose claws have been removed, but crabs are able to grow new claws. LUNCHEON, COCKTAILS, DINNER, AFTER THEATRE

DIG YOU NOW Show - business composers, a parade of performers who are now entertainment "names" and afficionados of good, obscure times, owe much to Ben Bagley. The showman appeared on the scene back in 1955 as producer of "Shoestring Revue," and his "Revisited" albums of lesser-known Rodgers and Hart, Cole Porter, Vernon Duke and others are still coming out.

still coming out.
"Ben Bagley's Sassy Musical Theater" is today's Interlude hour at Town Hall, 113 West 43d Street, starting at 5:45 P.M. (admission $3). Assisted by Larry O'Leno, Denise Powell and Marilyn Cooper, Mr. Bagley will stress lit-tle-known theater songs of major com-posers, along with anecdotes and slides.

SILVER SCREENINGS Several years ago, on the occasion of the publication of his autobiography, Frank Capra was asked by a reporter for The New York Times to name the most professional actors he ever worked

"Spencer Tracy and Katharine Rep-burn," said the veteran director. "Undoubtedly. Always on time, always knew their lines. They were into every-thing on the set, constructively. And these were New York stage people who didn't look down on Hollywood."

The result of this three-way collaboration, "State of the Union" (1948), adapted from the Pulitzer Prize-wmning political comedy by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, is seldom seen now in revival houses or on television. The film runs today through Tuesday in the Hepburn series at the Regency Theater (724-3700).

Also today: "Bell, Book and Candle" (1958) at 8:30 P.M. at the Undercrott e of Christ and St. Stephen's Church, 120 West 69th Street (between Broadway and Columbus Avenue). Ad-

Fisher Measures Up to Carnegie

By DONAL HENAHAN

Amateur acousticians and possibly a few of the professionals as well have been busy drawing comparisons between the rebuilt Avery Fisher Hall and its elder sister. Carnegie, And in these opening days of the New York

Philharmonics season, an extraordinary con-Appraisal flation of circumstances gave any interested listener the opportunity to hear the same work in both halls, with the same orchestra and the same conductor.

The work, the Mahler Third Symphoney, was the final per-formance of the Philharmonic's Mahler Festival at Carnegie on Monday night this week under Pierre Boulez. This reviewer had also heard the Philharmonic play Mah-ler's Third at Avery Fisher on last Thursday night in the season's opening subscription concert.

The first and most lasting impression was that the orchestra produced a splendid, satisfying sound in both halls. The Carnegie tone struck these unscientific ears as richer in the lower partials, or harmonics, but at Avery Fisher the fundamental notes were no

Resonance in the Feet

One of the pleasures of listening to orchestras at Carnegie has always been that certain loud low tones could be felt in one's shoes and thus in one's entire body. This was never possible in the old Avery Fisher, but in the new hall, with its wooden floor, there is a similar foot-vibrating resonance. Easily tening to the Mahler at Avery Fisher, this listener made check marks in the score at places where the sound was particularly beautiful or effective. Time after time, a mark went down at points where pianissimo playing was demanded in the violins and the winds. However, at the beginning of the fourth movement, where cellos and double basses alone are called on to float a triple pianissimo, "very slowly, mysteriously," the tone was less palpable in Avery Fisher than in Carnegie. On the other hand, the posthorn solos-trumpet in these performances—came through with greater tonal refulgence at the newer hall.

To some extent, such differences may be traceable to the inevitable vagaries of performance from one night to the next (The Carnegie performance was considerably less polished even though it was the Philharmonic's fourth of the Mahler within five days.)

Brilliant Fortissimo Climaxes

But more significant than the differences were the similarities in the performances at both halls. Mr. Boulez's approach to the Mahler Third and to the Mahler orchestra was recognizably the same: Great emphasis was placed on clean attacks and releases, restrained ex-pression and judicious balances. Fortissimo climaxes rang out brilliantly at both halls, and at Avery Fisher one never had the old, familiar sensation during loud pas-sages that someone was slapping two planks together. Against one's expectation, the detectable differences between the performance at Carnegie Hall halls remain, of course. While lis- proved to be the faster, more streamlined one, lasting about 93 minutes against not quite 98 on opening night at Avery Fisher.

In the old Avery Fisher, an orchestra was hard-pressed to sustain the excruciatingly long line that some Mahler conductors such as Jascha Horenstein and Leonard Bernstein have favored. Mr. Bernstein did it with great success at Avery Fisher at his valedictory concerts as the Philharmonic's music director, but the orchestra suffered with him throughout every agonizing note, especially in the expansive finale. Mr. Boulez speeded up a bit at Carnegie, probably because later performances of any work tend to be faster and a bit more perfunctory than the first

Sustained Without Strain

How else does one account for the fact that the first movement at Avery Fisher took 34 minutes 25 seconds and the finale 21 minutes 51 seconds, while at Carnegie four nights later the same move-ments went off in only 32 minutes 37 seconds and 20 minutes 10 seconds? The sssential point, how-ever, is that the more sustained performance took place in the newer hall, and without sounding like er hall, and without sounding like a strain on anyone.

On the whole, the comparison left this reviewer satisfied that New York has been extraordinarily lucky, at last: The new Avery Fisher is good, and yet not so dramatically different from or better than Carnegie to imperil the existence of the great lady on West existence of the great lady on West 57th Street

Did the nude scenes in the film bother her? "Not at all," shereplied, 'Tm not very beautiful, you know. I'm not Brigitte Bardot. But to be naked is just a way of life. When I go on holiday, I'm naked all the time. Besides, you give much more of yourself when you cry or do a very dramatic scene than you do when you're naked."

Known for Tragedies

Before "Cousin, Cousine," Miss Barrault had been seen here only in Eric Rohmer's 1969 film, "Ma Nuit Chez Maud," in which she played a very pure young Catholic girl. She said she is known to French audiences mainly for playing tragedies, especially on stage and television.

"They think of me as a dramatic actress there," she said with a smile. "I don't know why. In life, I'm very healthy and I'm laughing. But I do go mad a lot in my roles there. Once I died under the window of a man who had left me. And once, in a German play, I gave myself an abortion on stage with a surprise for the French public to see me in what is basically a comedy."

sort of dreams of being part of a large, unified, loving family." the actress said. "In this case, if a couple breaks up, they know they will always belong to some kind of community—their family."

Does "Cousin, Cousine" have a moral? "Yes, don't judge," she replied. "That's the moral, Don't judge anybody."

The film was also a hit in France One subject that Miss Barrault and her husband like to avoid is whether his job as head of France's largest movie company has helped to promote her career.

"In France, they don't pay much attention to things like that, like whether we're like Norma Shearer and Irving Thalberg," insisted Mr. du Plantier, the scion of an aristocratic family stretching back to the days of Louis XI.

Miss Barrault (irately): "Besides, I had been an actress for 11 years and he had been in the movies for only two years when I got this

The couple, who were childhood ethearts, have two children, David, 11, and Ariane, 7. They live in a mid-19th-century apartment on the chic Rue Monceau in Paris, and do not socialize much with the French movie crowd, Miss Barrault said, "because directors might feel they were being pres-sured into taking me in their films."

She also denied that being the niece of Jean-Louis Barrault had given her a boost in the business. Oh, no, I grew up in a convent school absolutely away from him,' she said. "He never helped me in any way. I don't think he was happy that I became an actress. My mother is a widow, and he thought I should have had a more serious job to earn money very soon to support her."

After their New York visit, the couple flew to Hollywood to show their film to several American directors, including Alfred Hitch-cock, But even if Hollywood offers are forthcoming, Miss Barrault is not quite sure she will accept them

"I just don't know, I don't want to be away from my home," she said. "I feel really French in my blood. I could do a film in a foreign country once perhaps twice, but not more."

Her husband smiled. "If we work harder and better. I think we can make a success with French films," he said. "That way we can still have big hits in America, but stay as we are-French."

A WEEK-LONG SLIDE IN BOND PRICES ENDS

Investors' Demand for Some New Issues Rises—Mississippi Sells $63 Million in Tax-Exempts

The credit market's steep week-long slide was halted yesterday, bond prices rose moderately and investor demand for some new issues became noticeably stronger. Mississippi sold $63 million of tax-exempt bonds that were priced to yield roughly a quarter-point more than they would have

A Camer warket is expected

After six sessions of the declining bond prices and yesterday's modest recovery, investment bankers and traders said they expected the fixed-income market to calm down now that the Treasury was about to disclose its plans for refinancing $4.32 billion of 6½ percent notes that come due on Nov. 15. "I think it's going to be steady for a while," a dealer in tax-exempt bonds said, in a typical comment.
As securities dealers prepared for the Treasury's announcement, they generally expected the Government's debt managers to make a three-part offering made up of, say, a three-year note, a note maturing in seven to 10 years and a long-term bond. If the Treasury decides to raise less than $2 billion of new cash or more than $4 billion, it would probably surprise the fixed-income market.

In the major tax-exempt financing of the day, Mississippi sold four issues of bonds, rated Aa by Moody's and A+ by Standard & Poor's, to raise $63 million for highways, schools, port development and a bridge.

The interest costs on the four issues ranged from 5.33 percent to 5.48 percent, rates somewhat higher than the 4.90 percent cost Mississippi incurred in its preceding bond sale on Aug. 24, when tax-exempt interest rates generally were higher. The difference apparently was caused by the longer maturities of the issues sold yesterday, the larger size of the financing and its greater complexity. The bonds were priced to yield from

The bonds were priced to yield from 3.29 percent on those maturin in 1977 to 6 percent on those due in 1996, (for bonds carrying a 4½ percent coupon), and all except about $8 million were reported sold.

Du Pont Plans to Raise $21 Million

E. I. du Pont de Neomurs & Company announced plans to raise $21 million for pollution-control facilities at some of its plants in New Jersey. The financing is of interest because tax-exempt bonds sold for blue-chip corporations by local governments in the Northeast are relatively rare. The interest income from the bonds will be exempt not only from Federal income tax but also from the new state income tax.

The Du Pont-backed bonds will be sold by the Industrial Pollution Control Financing Authority of Salem County, N.J., through an underwriting group headed by Morgan Stanley & Company.

In a small local financing, Hauppauge,
L.I. sold $1.88 million of school bonds, upgraded by Moody's to A from Baa, to a group led by the Chemical Bank. The bonds were offered to investors at yields ranging from 4 percent in 1977 to 6.90

sold today.
The total includes $150 million of notes maturing in 1983 that will carry an interest rate of 7.65 percent and a price of 100 percent of their face value. The other part will be $250 million of 30-year debentures offered as 8½'s at 99½ to yield just slightly less than 8.55 percent. A sinking fund will give the debentures an average life 22.4 years. They are rated A by Moody's and Aq by Standard & Poor's.

Will Your Family Be Hurt By New Estate and Gift Taxes?

Find out at a special Seminar, conducted by U.S. Trust Plaza Hotel, 9:45 AM, Tuesday, Nov. 9

If you're worth over $500,000, you should attend. Because the wealthier you are, the more the new tax changes may hurt you.

The Tax Reform Act of 1976 was signed October 4. But there are some steps you may be able to take to reduce its impact, if you act before January 1. In particular, you may want to make sizeable gifts.

These are the most sweeping changes in gift and estate tax rules in 35 years. Some changes are already in effect. Others go into effect on January 1, 1977. Others still later.

In the words of The Wall Street Journal, the new law "... could cost very rich families a lot of money while providing the modestly rich with less tax relief than they expect."

For example, the capital gains tax on inherited property may be much higher on future increases in value because of a significant change in the rules.

U.S. Trust, a leader in estate management, has organized a seminar which will be conducted in nontechnical language to help you understand these new rules. But, if you would like to bring your lawyer, you are welcome to do so.

It will be some time before the Internal Revenue Service and the courts define clearly every aspect of these revisions. But there is a good deal we know about these significant changes already, and we are pleased to share our knowledge with you.

Three tax and trust experts associated with U.S. Trust will discuss the highlights of changes in the rules governing estate and gift taxes.

The meeting will be short and to the point. You will be finished by lunchtime.

Here are some of the important topics which will be covered:

OIL CONCERNS INVEST IN ALTERNATE SOURCE OF ENERGY, U.S. FINDS

Library of Congress Reports Big Companies Try Coal, Geothermal, Solar and Uranium Development

By DAVID BURNHAM

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26—Most of the nation's largest oil companies have invested in alternate energy activities such as coal, uranium, geothermal energy and solar energy, according to a study done for the Library of Congress.

The study of investment activities by the major oil companies into other potential sources of energy was made public after Congress adjourned several weeks ago without considering legislation approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee that would have required the oil companies to divest themselves of petall cases. panies to divest themselves of retail gaso-line outlets and certain other activities.

The Library of Congress report, made available to The New York Times, was available to the New York times, was undertaken at the request of Representative John E. Moss, Democrat of California. It attempted to correlate all the publicly reported alternate energy activities of the seven largest oil companies—Exxon, Texaco, Mobil, Standard Oil of California, Gulf Oil, Standard Oil of Indiana and Shell.

Least Active Concerns Cited

According to the admittedly incomplete study, two of the companies—Gulf Oil and Shell—had investments in each of the alternate energy areas that were studied. The areas were oil shale, tar sands, uranium, coal, solar energy and geothermal energy.

Te study concluded that Standard Oil

Callaghan for Cuts Abroad, Not at Home

James Callaghan outside No.

He Warns I.M.F. Against Facing Policies on Britain 'Harmful to the Economy'

LONDON, Oct. 25-Despite criticism from its political opponents, the Labor Government showed no signs today of backing down from its belief tht Britain, in order to save the pound, might prefer to reduce its overseas commitments before cutting social prograss at home.

This was the stark and unexpected meassage contained in a warning last night from the Prime Minister,
James Callaghan, who discussed Britain's deteriorating economic situation with a panel of journalists on the British Broadcasting Corporation's "Panorama" program.

There have been persistent reports the International Monetary as a condition of answering

Britain's request for $3.9 billion in standby credit, would ask the Gov-ernment to make sharp reductions in public spending and take other belttightening measures.

These reports have been denied here, in Washington and in other capitals. But the British Government is obviously worried that its creditors will seek to apply some new pressures, and it was with this in mind that Mr. Callaghan issued his warning to others not to try to push Britain to hard and too far.

"If, for example, the I.M.F. were to try to force us into policies which be so harmful to the econo-

Bankers on Continent Distressed by Remarks

By CLYDE H. FARNSWORTH Special to The New York Times

PARIS, Oct. 26—Disquiet is grow-ing on the Continent over Britain's third monetary crisis this year and its implications for world economic and financial stability. Bankers in Paris, Zurich, Frankfurt

What disturbed them was the threat implicit in Mr. Callaghan's remarks of dire consequences for Eu-rope if help were not forthcoming,

The allegations, filed in Manhattan Federal Court by the United States Attor-ney on behalf of the Italian Government, contended that Mr. Sindona used Banca Privata Finanziaria, later merged with another Sindona bank, the Banca Privata Italiana, to funnel large amounts of Finanziaria deposits outside the country.

Mr. Sindona had previously told the Italian Government, according to the charges, that the funds were on deposit in other Italian banks.

The financier, now living at the Pierre Hotel in New York, held a major interest in the Franklin National Bank when it failed in 1974. In an unrelated situation, he was sentenced in absentia in Italy last June to three and a half years in prison on charges stemming from the collapse of his Banca Privata Italiana.

In its allegations, the Italian Government charged that Mr. Sindona arranged for funds to be sent abroad, typically to Amincor Bank of Zurich or Banque de

'MODERATE RISE' IS SOUGHT

Market Steadiness on Monday and Ford Tax-Cut Proposals Seen as Factors in Advance

By ALEXANDER R. HAMMER

The Dow Jones industrial average spurted more than 10 points yesterday, with blue-chip, glamour and special-situation issues leading the way.

Analysts said an important factor in the upswing was an announcement by a Saudi Arabian official that his country would press for only a "moderate rise" in oil prices at the Dec. 15 ministerial meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Previously, a few other OPEC countries had indicated they would seek oil price increases of 10 to 15 percent. Such a price rise would increase worldwide inflation, which has been easing.

The Saudi Arabian official, Alawi Darwish Kayal, who is Minister of Posts and Telegraph, said at a news conference in Montreux. Switzerland, that his Govern-ment's basic policy was "to help the West as well as ourselves." He declined to be specific about what price increase his country would seek.

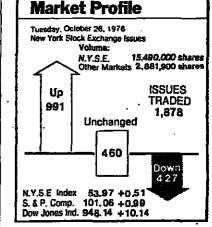

Rise of 5 to 7 Percent Predicted

An analyst commented that Mr. Kayal's announcement brought many investors back into the market. The analyst predicted that the OPEC nations would eventually agree on an oil price increase of 5

The last oil increase occurred on Oct.

1, 1975, when it rose 10 percent after many varied estimates of what the rise would be.

petitor who violates the law for triple damages.

"Marginal retailers in the city have gone bankrupt since the giant stores opened on Sunday," said Louis Powsner, owner of a men's wear store who appeared as president of the Joint Council of Kings County Boards of Trade.

Members of Mr. Powsner's group picketed in the morning outside the No. 2 building of the World Trade Center before the meeting convened on the 24th floor. The pickets carried signs urging an end to Sunday sales.

"The opponents of the Sunday closing law said it was antiquated," he continued. "But what can be more antiquated than a seven-day week?" He added that Sunday operations for owners of small stores imposed a "physical impossibil-ity" for them, hurt resale values of business and required substitute personnel who were not so effective as full-time employees

A vigorous proponent of Sunday operations, Jerome B. Shier, executive vice president of Martin Paint Stores, which operates more than 40 stores in the restroyalities are accounted that in the metropolitan area, asserted that his stores' Sunday operations "have been profitable . . increased our vol-ume and our profits . . increased jobs and contributed more dollars to local and state taxes."

New York's Chinatown wants no Sunday law, Yao T. Huang, president of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce of New York, told the legislators. "We thank the state for striking down the law. Chinatown's business depends solely on Saturday and Sunday, when many Chinese come here to shop. Many Chinese are Buddhists and do not observe Sunday as a holiday."

Waldbaum's Inc., a leading New York

area supermarket chain, will have 78 of its 100 stores in the metropolitan area operating this Sunday, Marvin Levy, vice president, said. "But we regret it," he added. "We are doing it for competitive reasons, and we hope it will not be for long. All Sunday business does is spread your six-day sales over seven days."

Steven Jacoby, staff counsel for the New York Metropolitan Council of the American Jewish Congress, urged the Assemblymen "not to undertake the futile effort of reviving a Sunday law; the Sabbath provision of the old law is still in effect and I advise you to wipe that out, too."

But John H. Schmidt, who represented the Catholic War Veterans, said that "Sunday must be preserved as a day of rest; let Sunday be a day to renew our spiritual values and not allow it to be an occasion to increase our worldly goods."

FAO Schwarz to Open For Sunday Yule Sales

FAO Schwarz will be the second Fifth Avenue specialty store to open its doors on Sundays during the coming Christmas' shopping season.

Last week, Bonwit Teller announced that it would open nine of its 12 stores in this area on Sundays from Nov. 28 through Dec. 19. The oil can penetrate minute openings in the surface of the egg. In eggs one or two days old, biological activity stops immediately. In eggs three to five days old, with least partially formed larvae, death occurs in minutes.

The ILTA is one of a network of international institutes funded by a consortium of governments, foundations and United Nations agencies. The institute estimates that the cow-pea weevil—formally called Calloso-bruchus maculatus—destroys 24,000 tons of cowpeas worth $1.6 million each year in Nigeria alone.

Kodak Called Cautious

Although the Eastman Kodak Company is indisputably a high-technology enterprise, spending some 6 percent of sales (or more than $300 million this year) on research and develop-ment, its approach to "new ventures," as Walter Fallon, its president, calls them, is cautious.

Mr. Fallon stressed this in recent appearances in California before se-curities analysts, whom he also told of Kodak's plans to ship a million of its newly introduced instant-picture cameras (listing for $53.50 and $69.50) by year's end and several million more next year.

The figures implied a Kodak intention to match swiftly or even surpass the Polaroid Corporation in sales of color instant cameras of the SX-70 type first marketed in 1972.

Both the Kodak instant picture system, invading the 25-year monopoly of Polaroid, and a line of high-speed document copy machines, Mr. Fallon said, fit Kodak's rules for entering new

We must assure ourselves that the expertise to properly develop the venture is within our reach. And we must feel that the fit extends, as well, to our capabilities in marketing, distribution and customer

An additional hope, Mr. Fallon indicated, is that a new product will be in "harmony" with others. He said sales of conventional photographic products had held up well after intro-duction of the instant-picture system in the United States late last June.

Proposal for Flat-Rate Electricity Billing Is Assailed

BOSTON, Oct. 26 --- "Utter chaos" would follow if Massachusetts voters approved a referendum next Tuesday calling thing."

thing."

Mr. Olsen dismissed a Massachusetts them here. for so-called "flat-rate" electricity billing, the president of one of the state's leading industrial employers said today.

Kenneth H. Olsen, president of the Digital Equipment Corporation, made the statement at a shareholders' meeting that approved a three-for-one stock split and was told of quarterly sales and earnings increases of 46 percent above the same period last year.

The flat-rate billing proposal by groups associated with Ralph Nader, the consumer advocate, would require the state's Utilities Department to set rates for industries, hospitals, universities and other large users equal to those for householders, regardless of differences in electricity-distribution costs. The measure is designed to encourage conservation and provide rate relief to small electric con-

The proposal is strongly opposed by organizations, particularly universities and hospitals, whose rates would rise, but Mr. Olsen's criticisms were among the most outspoken to date from individual business leaders in Massachusetts.
In a news release, Mr. Olsen said that his company's $4.6 million electricity bill in Massachusetts would rise 37 percent

Mr. Olsen told a news conference after the shareholders' meeting that the company's employment of 13,000 in Massachusetts, out of a worldwide total of 26,000, was probably "already too big," having increased 3,000 in the last year.

Here's how the arithmetic works out for a borrower who elects an annual 3 percent increase over 10 years on a 30-year mortgage of $35,000 carrying an interest rate of 8.5 percent.

In the first year, the borrower would pay $223 a month in interest and amortization, or $46 less than a standard level payment loan of $269 a month.

The payments would rise to $237 a month in the third year, to $251 in the fifth year, beyond the level cost of $269 to $274 in the eighth year and even out at $330 a month in the 11th

Thus, the payments could be tailored in a rough way to what a borrower thinks the rise in his income will be.

In effect, though, he is borrowing more money to finance the shortfall in the early payments. The unpaid interest is added to the borrower's mortgage bal-

Under a standard level payment mortgage, the borrower would pay back a total of $96,840 over the 30-year term. With a G.M.P he would pay back $102,674—a difference of $5,834.

A key question is whether the borrower thinks that kind of premium is worth the comparatively small reductions (they range from a maximum of $46 to a low of $3 a month) in the first seven years of payments.

Other variations available under the plan would change the mix, of course.

In general, the longer period of gradua-tion, the lower the mortgage payments in the early years.

Some bankers, however, think all of the arithmetic will be made moot by the somewhat higher cost of servicing

G.M.P. loans and potential conflict with state truth in lending and banking laws.

Mr. Callaghan's warning followed a day that saw a precipitous drop in the value of the pound below $1.60. The pound stabilized today at $1.59. The Prime Minister said he was "not G.M.P. offers the borrower five different options. Three of them allow the

"We are still a very considerable power in terms of influence in the world," he said. "Our contribution to the Army on the Rhine is a substantial one. Now, if we are pushed, because there is a shortterm problem, into a position where we would have to make a choice as to whethwe carry on these responsibilities or whether we have to say, 'Sorry, our eco-nomic situation demands that we put our own position first,' this would be a very serious matter for Europe.'

Drawing the Line

Mr. Callaghan and the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Denis Healey, feel they have gone about as far as they can in squeezing the public and testing the pa-tience of their political allies in the Labor Party. They have imposed limits on wages, ordered some freezes and even some reductions in spending plans, and raised interest rates to record levels.

But the opposition Conservatives and many bankers want still more deliberate deflation, and today the Tories seized on Mr. Callaghan's suggestion about reduc-ing Britain's European commitments as a sign of the bankruptcy of Labor Party

Pound Problems Continue With New Low of $1.59

The United States dollar recovered on

LONDON, Oct. 26 (AP) - The British pound slipped to another record low of $1.59 today after steadying briefly as the Government discussed how to recover from yesterday's worst single-day drop in the next fiscal year, but the Labor Party's left-wing is dead set against cut-ting expensive welfare state spending. Dealers were nonplussed by the late slide of more than I cent. Some said they most currency exchanges across Europe francs, up from 4.9850. Today's pound closing was almost a half cent down from the closing yesterday of $1.5950. At one point yesterday it tradedat $1.5730—7½ cents off the Friday closing of $1.6481.

The pound's response to the economic suggestions of a little-known legislator showed how nervous the market is as Britain prepares to welcome International Monetary Fund representatives who will study the books and recommend what strings to attach to the $3.9 billion loan Britain seeks to stave off bankruptcy.

A report in The Sunday Times—the main factor in the pound's decline—said that the United States and the LMF. had agreed that the pound should drop to $1.50 as a condition for the $3.9 billion loan. According to the report, the LM.F. believes a $1.50 pound would make British exports easier to sell.

The British economy has been suffering a crisis of confidence, and the pound has dropped from $2 since March 5. Britain's principal financial problems are inflation of almost 14 percent a year, a budget deficit of more than $30 billion, low productivity and high unemployment.

The Government said unemployment fell from 6.2 percent in September to 5.8 percent in mid-October. But most of the drop came from young people getting their first jobs, and there was only a minor change in the "hard-core" unem-

Interdependence of Economies
Many of his Labor supporters, however, saw Mr. Callaghan's comments as a time by reminder that the economies of the world were more interdependent than ever, and that nobody would gain if British was forced to reduce the standard of living of its citizens and, in consequence, its purchasing power as a nation in world markets.

"What I want to make clear," Mr. Callaghan said, "is that we have to get sustainable growth."

EUROPE DROUGHT CALLED

SPUR TO POTATO EXPORTS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 26 (AP)—Drought in Europe earlier this year has helped cause a 160 percent rise in United States potato exports, according to a new analysis by the Agriculture Department.

Officials said, however, that 1976 United States production would have plenty of potatoes this winter. But the effect of the larger exports on domestic retail prices is not clear at this time, according to the department.

Through August, potato exports totaled 887.4 million pounds, up from 346.2 million during the corresponding eight months of 1973, the department's Economic Research Service said in a current for the United States.

Advertising Magazines Urged to Be Aggressive

By PHILIP H. DOUGHERTY Special to The New York Times

SOUTHAMPTON, Bermuda, Oct. 26-Magazines, once the only national advertising medium, are now looked upon only as carriers of special promotions or send-off coupons by many of the major advertisers.

That's what William Tenebruso, senfor vice president and media director of Wells, Rich, Greene, told members of the Magazine Publishers Association this morning at the Southampton Prin-

And he urged them to adopt a defen-sive and aggressive strategy—protect-ing a current important client such as liquor and cigarets while at the same time going after the country's top 25 advertisers whose overwhelming advertising spending is in television.

In most media, with the exception of newspapers and magazines, the top

100 advertisers represent the majority of the advertising. Newspapers have had the local support, and magazines, Mr. Tenebruso said, are left with "a bunch of small advertisers" who are in magazines because of their small budgets or because they like maga-zines selective audiences or for their ability to showcase an ad.

He cited the disparate spending in television of such companies as Proctor & Gamble, Sears, Warner-Lambert and Bristol-Myers and asked, "How is it you guys can let it happen?"

What the magazine people should be doing, he said, is hitting the major advertisers with magazine research at every opportunity and demonstrating the tangible advantage of adding magazines to television as a way to maintain advertising impressions at a time of rising costs.

He said his own goal was to increase the magazine spending of all his agen-cy's clients every year. The first exam-ple of that, he noted, was the Trans World Airlines account, which increased its magazine advertising 58 percent (from 7 percent of total budget to 11.1 percent) last year.

With Mr. Tenebruso at the crack-ofdawn seminar on advertising sales was Charles A. Tucker, group vice president of the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, the country's top magazine advertiser. And although he spoke glowingly of the medium, he was not without a com-

"Sometimes it seems you take us for granted—married us for our money," ne said going on to ask his listeners for more research on target audiences and to salesmen who know more about the advertisers' wants and needs.

Other research could be done on the effectiveness of a spread as opposed to two, full-page separated ads in the same magazine; the effects of clutter; the best separation for competing cigarette brands, and the best use of advertising copy tailored to its editorial envi-

Mr. Tucker also asked that publishers rethink - and perhaps eliminate premium charges for regional additions and four color-bleed ads. In the course of his talk entitled,

"Is there life after television?" he spoke kindly of magazines and their ability to pinpoint specific markets, also observing, "Magazines can be held in the hand, studied, shown to a friend, carry coupons and can challenge the mind-

He said that when the broadcast ban' hit the cigarette industry in 1971 many people in his business thought that it meant the end of new product introductions, even though new products are needed for corporate survival.

Now how does he feel since getting accustomed to using all forms of print advertising?

"I'm not at all sure we'd run back to television with open arms," he said. At the general session that followed the seminars, Seymour Lieberman, president of Lieberman Research, reported on the study of how and why people buy magazines done for the Publishers Clearing House. Based on lengthy personal interviews with 1,326 persons over 18 years of age, the study showed that 76 percent of them bought at least one magazine a year but almost half of all magazines were purchased by "heavy buyers," described as those who buy nine or more different titles a year.

These people, who constitute only 21 percent of magazine buyers, are, Mr. Lieberman reported, more desirable advertising audiences in every way. They are younger have a higher income, are better educated, spend more, are contemporary and upbeat and are more involved in life generally.

Nonbuyers, on the other hand, "show a degree of social alienation." So much

The study also disclosed an error in the conventional wisdom that has it that people who buy a magazine on the newsstand will spend more time with it than a subscriber who has paid

Publishers in recent years have been making readers pay more for magazines, increasing both cover prices and subscription rates. Mr. Lieberman warned them to be careful in this area since the study showed that only 38 since the study showen that only so percent of subscribers and 49 percent of buyers of single copies would continue to get as many magazines if prices continued to go up. The majority of those questioned said they would either drop some or all of the publications they now read.

'Moderate' Price Rise In Oil Held Saudi Aim

Alawi Darwish Kayal, Saudi Arabia's Minister of Posts and Telegraph, said yesterday at a news conference in Montreux, Switzerland that his Government would seek a "moderate" increase in oil prices at the Dec. 15 meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countires. He declined to provide any figures.

"We know," the Saudi minister added, "that the rate of inflation attributable to oil is only 2 percent. In OPEC, they are thinking that, because of inflation, hey must raise prices a little just to take care of inflation."

"I assure you," he added, "that
Saudi Arabia will maintain its stand as a responsible member of the inter-national community. We will use our influence to try and make it a moder-

Some kind words for the editorial side of magazines came from Peter Clarke Jr., chairman of the department of journalism of the University of Michigan, who said, "I'd like to talk about editorial leadership in the world of thought and innovation. My thesis is simple. More often than not, magazines are the medium where ideas first surface for public consumption. Magazines are the place where new issues take shape and new anxieties are first

The new money is to be used for floodlights, an ultramodern security system, a cafeteria, a concrete roof and other improvements. The architect talks also of possible future Phase 4, 5 and 6 grants, and the community's hope of generating enough profit from rents to start new projects. There is also hope of some day getting a pri-vate mortgage on the building, which would be another source of funds for new ventures and for sustaining the community corporation itself.

All of this is the Federal Government's first effort at heavy subsidization of a community-run industrial real estate enterprise, the backers say. They are hoping that the idea will catch on elsewhere in the country.

Meanwhile, tenants are needed. They have not flooded in, even though the rents of about $1.50 a square foot are far below cost. Unsubsidized, comparable space might cost almost twice as much, Mr. Schwartz said.

Besides R. & N. Knitted Headwear, which has 21,000 square feet of space and 75 employees, the only other occupant so far is a Federally funded jobtraining organization, Project T.R.U.E., with 2,500 square feet on the top floor.

Another clothing maker, Robert Richarde Inc., which makes women's sportswear in a decaying loft a few blocks away, has signed a lease for 42,000 square feet—the entire second floor—and intends to move in when preparatory work is complete next month. Richarde employs 120 people at its present location.

One of the floors in the Brooklyn building that was renovated by Williams burg Industrial Development Enterprises.

Renting has been hurt by the weak-ness of the industrial market in general, said Sheridan Mechaber of the I.C.A. Realty Company in Queens, the broker who brought in Richarde. But he said that the Williamsburg building would be fully rented given six mouths to a user. The best here is months to a year. The best hope is from the innumerable small companies in and around the Brooklyn and Queens waterfront, he added.

With no taxes due to the city, it will take only $125,000 to $150,000 in rent income a year to break even, real estate sources estimate, a point that would be reached when the building is about half filled.

One special source of pride to the mainly black, Hispanic and Hassidic leaders of the community organization is the vegetable "farm" that has been built on the roof. It is a one-acre "hydroponic" food factory, said Frank Lockard, vice president of Miracle Gardens Inc., which installed it under a $30,000 Government contract. There is no soil, but the plants are fed from nutrients pumped through a system of pipes in which the potted plants sit. Crops from the "farm" will be sold at reduced costs to plant workers—a fringe benefit, the maangement says. One future plan is to acquire and demolish some abandoned neighbor-hood buildings to create additional parking. At present there are 2,500 square feet for parking, and, under Phase 3, 10,000 square feet are to be

Jack Beerman, one of the partnerowners of Richarde, which is moving in next month, said he signed a fiveear lease with a renewal option. big thing for us wer to get space all on one floor," he added.

Some private real estate operators were outraged by the Williamsburg project, feeling that in 1970 or 1971 the building could have been marketed privately, upgraded and rented out at no public cost. Instead, vandalism increased the cost of improvement during the long vacancy period. "It was a waste of taxpayers' money," said one investor.

On the other hand, the enterprise has brought forth an outpouring of community pride and cooperative ef-fort, on display at the celebration last week. Nor is it conceivable that private capital could or would have cre-ated such amenities at marketable rents. "The community really accomplished what it set out to do," said Mrs. Maria Badillo, head of the com-munity corporation. "There is no need for industry to move out."

TV: A Not So 'Amazing Grace'

WNET Musical Special Impressive in Small Doses, but Is Generally a Program in Search of a Point

"AMAZING GRACEAmerica in Song"
Alook at the American character through American songs. As a rather elaborate anthology, Amazing Grace-America in Song" is neither amazing nor particularly graceful. Produced and directed by Allan Miller for WNET/13, the 90-minute program to be shown at 9 tonight is a collection in search of a point. At the outset, John Steinbeck is quoted to the outset, John Steinbeck is quoted to the effect that you can learn more about people by listening to their songs than anything else. But "Amazing Grace" attempts to do too much, winds up doing too little and we learn less about people than about a variety of tunes. To begin, quite imaginatively, there is the national anthem, sung by a diverse collection of Americans at a football game in Boston's Fenway Park. This is followed by a minnscule ethnic tapestry incorporating snippets of Puer-tapestry incorporating snippets of Puer-to Rican, Irish, Italian and German music. The scene switches to a schoolroom to listen to a class wend its charming way through "Mrs. Murphy's Chowder." And then the Allman Broth-Chowder." And then the Aliman Brothers are discovered in a giant arena, with Greg Allman doing one of his Ray Charles imitations. The group is introduced to the huge audience by Jimmy Carter. Which raises the delicate point about the specter of equal time for Gerald Ford, introducing, say, the Captain and Tennile.

Taken in small pieces, "Amazing Grace" can be very impressive. There is Phyllis Curtin singing an Emily Dickenson poem, set to music and played on piano by Aaron Copland. There is a wonderful old woman in North Carolina extolling the virtues of rural life ("You can have your own fun here and nobody hardly bothers you"). But taken as a whole, the center of the program doesn't hold. gram doesn't hold.

The collection crumbles into a hodgepodge. Original material, recorded especially for the program, is mixed with clips from other sources, not only film and documentary but also other television series, such as WGBH's "Religious America." And what seems like an inordinate amount of time is devoted to native folk songs, which do not happen to be one of this writer's enduring passions. Chain-gang songs, sea chanties and railroad sagas get ex-ceedingly repetitive very quickly.

By far the best part of the project is saved for the final half-hour beginning with "Beautiful Dreamer" and a complete and marvelous rendition of "After the Ball Is Over."

This is followed, at long last, by a survey of black jazz, particularly the blnes. Film clips of Bessie Smith and Billie Holiday, which I've seen on other TV programs several times in the last couple years, remain thrilling. Louis Armstrong and Jack Teagarden do their routine on "O! Rockin' Chair's Got Me." Lena Horne, recorded at Hollywood's Coconut Grove, sings "The Lady Is a Tramp," spiced with some bitter side comments about her experiences in film.

This is followed by some nonsense about a truck driver listening to Johnny Cash on his radio, but "Amazing Grace" concludes with a lovely piece by Charles Ives. "The Things piece by Charles Ives. "The Things Our Fathers Loved" proclaims "Now hear the songs, I know not what are the words." The songs are there. The words are there.

"Amazing Grace" provides a glimpse of the possibilities for an extensive TV series that would examine all of them in more than superficial skim-ming. The serious side of four funny lad
